MATHADIDIOARTMAN.

(From the San Francisco Ets.) That it is brief, may be seen at a glanco; that it is true, I most emphatically avow. About five years, ago, or thereabout, John Ainsley—on, "Pap Ainsley," as he was familiarly called—was the own of a bandcart, and carned a living by conveying miscellaneous parcels from one section of the city to another, and receiving therefor the reasonable remuneration of fifty cent. per load. To designate the occapation in the prosiest language possible he was a hand-part-man, and when not employed, could always be found thurs ing working hours at the corner of Montgomery and California streets. His luir and long heard were quite gray, and his limbs feeble; and if he could not shove as heavy a load through the deep sand or up the steep grade above him as the stalwart Teuton en the opposite corner, thereby their way to give an easy job to "Pap

Four years ago last September, (I recollect the month, for I had a note of four thousand dollars to pay, and was compelled ed to do some pretty sharp financiering to meet it.) having two or three dozen volumes to transfer to my lodgings, I gave "Pap Ains'ey" the task of transportation. Arriving at my room just as he had deposited the last armful on the table, and broast observing that the old man looked considerably fatigned after climbing three flights of stairs two or three times, I invited him to take a glass of brandy-a bottle of which I usually kept in my room for medicinal and soporific purposes. Although grateful for the invitation, he politely declined. I urged, but he was in-flexible. I was astonished.

"Do you never alrink?" said I. "Very seldom," he replied, dropping into a chair at my request, and wiping the prespiration from his forehead.

Welk if you drink at all," I insisted. " you will not find as fair an excuse in the next twelve months for indulging, for you appear fatigued and scarcely able to

"To be frank," said the old man, "I do not drink now. I have not tasted intoxicating liquor for fiftee n years, since—" "Since when?" I inquired, thoughtlessly, observing his hesitation. The old man told me. Sixteen years ago he was a well-to-do farmer, near Syraonse, New York. He had one child, a daughter. While attending a boardingschool in that city, then a girl of sixteen years of age, she formed an attachment for a young physician. Acquainting her father with the circumstances, he flatly refused his consent to a union with a mun whom he had never seen, and removing her from school, despatched a note to the young gallant, with the somewhat pointed information that his presence in the neighborhood of the Ains ey farm would not meet with favor. The reader of course surmises the result, for such a proceeding could have but one result. In less than a month there was an elopement. The father loaded his double-barrelled shot gun, and swore vengeance but failing to find the fugitive, he took to the bottle. His good wife implored him not to give way to despair, but he drank the deeper, and accused her of encouraging the elopement. In three months the wife died, and at the expiration of a year when the young people returned to Syracuse from Connected the old man-diarging the favorite with his ecticut, where they had remained with the parents of the husband, they learned that the old-man had sold his farm, squandered the proceeds, and was almost destitute. Learning their arrival, Ainsley drank himself into a frenzy, and proceeded to the hotel where they were stopping, attacked the husband, wounded him in the arm by a pistol shot, and attempted the life of his daughter, who happily escaped uninjured through the interposition of persons brought to the spot by the report was dismissed after remaining six months. In 1851 he came to California. He had followed mining for two years, but finding his strength unequal to the pursuit. returned to this city, purchased a hand-cart, and—the rest is known. "Since then," concluded the old man, bowing his face in his hands in agony, " I have not tasted liquor, nor have I seen my poor I regretted that I had been so inquisifire and expressed to the sufferer the

HAWLEY'S SOLIDIFIED

Dental Cream, for Cleansing, whitening & Preserving THE TEETH.

THE LEGALL.

THIS article is prepared with the greatest care upon a scientific prinospies, and warranted not to contain anything in the elightest degree deleterous to the Teeth or Gums. Some of our most enthent Peatal Surgeons have given their assection to, and cheerfully recommend it as a preparation of superior qualities for cleansing, whitening and preserving the Teeth. It cleans them readily, rendering them benuitfully white and pearly, without the slightest injury to the enamel. It is healing to the gums where they are nicerist d and sore. It is also an excellent disinfector for old and decayed teeth, which are often exceedingly offensive. It gives a rich and creamy taste to the mouth, cleansing it thoroughly, and imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath.

Having carefully examined A. Mawley's "Solidified Dental Cream." I hereby cheerfully recommend it to the public generally. It is mexiculous preparation for cleaning and accessiving the teeth, and can be used by all persons with the atmost confidence, as its properties are perfectly battniers. Besides proserving the teeth, it promotes a healthy action to the gums, and imparts a plearanthe a teithe breath.
