MR. EDITOR: - The Montrose Republican of May 1st, 1866, contained a piece headed "Trespass," which, after blaming the people for driving on the ground adjoining the lake, to witness the solemn, very impressive and useful ordinance of baptism, which our Saviour, to whom we are all indebted, has plainly commanded us to do as a way of publicly owning Him, wound off in this wire:

"But people are too apt to forget the Christian precept: 'As ye would that

After it appeared, a representation of the Baptist denomination, (for that is the one which would naturally be blamed, although there were there quite a large number from the Presbyterian and other churches,) felt sorry that it transpired, and that they were censured as tresspassing, and doing damage upon the ground, er of the ground, for all damages incurred, humbly regretting that they had trespassed, if such was the case. But for some reason or impulse he did not accept a compensation. That, may be, was well letin and Forney's Press. It reads thus: enough; but why did not he let the people know through the easy medium in which he evidently maliciously blamed and custom, shall answer for all monetary injuries, and not leave the multitude under the false impression that they had done a wrong without being willing to make it

Oh, man! people are apt to forget the precept, " As ye would that others should do unto you, do ye so unto them," as was manifested by you, H. H. Frazier.

Now, would it not be honorable in you, even at this late period, to let the people

Lathrop, June 7, 1866. E.M.T.

The Press is still on the anxious bench on the subject of "Federal patronage." Yesterday it gave a long and fearful wail, and frankly admitted that the decapitation of the Rumps was "one of the crying evils of the day."

Well, let the evils cry!
