- Fright of the Radicals.

To say that the radicals are badly frightened over the Philadelphia convention is to express the matter very mildly. It has confirmed the breach that has been widening so long between them and the conservative republicans, and has forever the Conservative candidates. The massprecluded the idea of their ever reuniting. They have seen depart from them their President, six members of the Senate Being nearly thirty per cent. of their whole strength in that body, all the seven members of the cabinet including Seward, a large number of their members of the lower house; the chairman of their national committee, and large numbers of country. And, of course, this produces not only fright, but a very bad fright indeed, the worst fright by far the abolition party has received since its first triumph.

And it must be acknowledged they are frightened not without cause. The scepser has departed from them, and they realize the fact. The vast federal patronage they have wielded is fast melting away; the patronage of State, county and municipal governments which they have enjoyed is fast following, and what is worst of all, the people who have been hood. winked so largely by their loyal and lying pretensions, are opening their eyes to the just and wise policy of President Johnson as fast as possible. The political intelligence from every portion of the State is of the most gratifying character. In all sections the Democracy are thoroughly aroused, and Hiester Clymer, the Democratic candidate for
