. Charmed by Serpents.

That the serpent is endowed with the power to charm birds which they capture, and the ability to facinate the larger animals, and even to influence the intellect of man, is an old and well established the-

A marvelous incident of this character little boy of four or five years of age, of Irish parentage, in Bracken County, was in the habit during the whole of last summer of going out in the woods pear his home, to play with his "pretty things," as attained the age of seventy years-being he called them. After much persussion, one day his mother was induced to follow him to his play grounds to see what attracted him so much, when, to her horror she discovered her little darling playing with a trio of huge black snakes, wholly unconscious of peril. The boy was completely fascinated, and would advance and retreat, and sport and dally with his hideous comrades, as if he were in the charmed circle of his brotners and sisters. The mother in terror ran to the house crying for help, when the father of the lad rushed to the rescue of his boy, and after some difficulty killed the snakes. Wonderful to relate—and we have this information from a gentleman of unquestionable veracity—the little boy soon took to his bed, from which he never arosehe pined away and died-an early victim to the fascination of the serpent.

Married by Mistake

Helen F. Jeliman, attended by Mr. AustinHumphrey and Annie E. Crause, went to St. Paul's Church, the former to get married, and the latter to act as groomsman and bridesmaid. They all stood up before the altar, and the officiating clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Dunn, supposing made without pockets. that both couples were to be married, requested the gentlemen to join hands with and in a very short space of time the four were made two. The situation being fully realized by the latter couple, they concluded to accept what they could not very we'l help, and all adjourned to their boarding house quite well pleased with the result of the preacher's mistake."

How Much Corn in Severty Pounds of Ears.—It is customary for Western farmers to sell their corn in the ear, and they give seventy pounds for a bushef. The Prairie Farmer is authority for saying that seventy pounds of old corn on the cob make sixty five pounds and thirteen ounces. Certainly this will more than pay any farmer for shelling his corn at home. On any prairie farm the cobs alone will pay for shelling, as they are worth nearly as much as coal, pound for pound.

2. They are more easily understood and used, and less liable to derangement than any other machines.

3. They are capable of executing perfectly, without change of adjustment, a much greater variety of work than other machines.

4. The stitch made by those machines is much more firm, elastic and durable, especially upon articles which require to be washed and ironed, than any other stitch: 5. This stitch, owing to the minu er in which the under thread is invrought, is much the most plump and beautiful in use, and retains this plumpness and beauty even upon articles frequently washed and ironed until they are worn out.
