

Advertising Adventurers.
Feeling that a lack of profitable employment kept many of my young friends in the way of that celebrated Socratic personage who "always finds something for idle hands to do," I sent five dollars to some philosopher in Maine who was willing to communicate a method of making an easy livelihood to all young men of enterprising habits possessed of a V. Back came a book by return of post. The volume was labelled "Typographia." On opening it a slip of paper was found inserted between the title page and the blank leaves, and on the slip was written:
"You can be either a type setter, a proof reader, or a foreman, by reading this book. It contains all the necessary information. You may require a little practice, which you can gain by hiring yourself out for a year or two to my respectable printer."
E. E."

This was nearly as good as the advice to a seeker after fortune who sent money to an advertiser in Hartford, Connecticut, and received the advice "to peddle cigars, half Havana and half home made, as I did, and be always ready to pick up a stray chicken."
My curiosity was next exercised by an advertisement setting forth that for one dollar the likeness of my "future wife or husband" would be sent. I consulted with half a dozen bachelor friends on the subject, and we unanimously resolved to invest one dollar each for the immense privilege of seeing the individuals who were to be our partners in this "wale of tears, and who were to double our blessedness by sharing our singularities. It was understood that each was to exhibit the likeness of his predicted bride for the inspection of the company, be she fair or unfair. In due time I received a carte de visite through the post office. It bore on its face the representation of a female form got up in the height of the latest fashion, regardless of expense. A splendid ostrich feather crowned what, from its magnificence and my ignorance, I will venture to designate an "empire hat. A velvet cloak trimmed with lace was surmounted with a superb fur cape. A robe of black silk was ornamented with numerous devices that might find their origin in the brains of a kaleidoscope. A foot peeped out from under a white skirt, revealed by the dress being slightly raised. One tiny tightly gloved hand was just visible. The face—but there was the trouble, it was a back view—and it might as well have been taken from a drygoods man's "dummy" as from the human form divine, so far as the "likeness" conveyed any idea to my mind. This was keeping the word of promise to the ear and breaking it to the hope with a vengeance. I felt inclined to tear the thing up, but, remembering my promise to my friends, I forbore. I found afterwards that we were all served alike. We have this consolation, however, that our wives are to be fashionably dressed; that is, if the present fashion miraculously continues till we are married.

I saw, lately, a paragraph intimating that to an anxious inquirer the advertiser of a receipt for the prevention of the freezing of cisterns or wells had answered with this twenty five cents worth of advice:
"Take your cistern and well into the house on cold nights and keep up a good fire."
Checky enough but no worse than the advice I paid a dollar for to an advertiser who offered a remedy for frost bitten feet and chapped hands, and which advice was embraced in three words, almost Shakespearean: "Go to Cuba!"

How to have Mealy Potatoes.
It is a very common thing in the spring to have strong watery potatoes on the table, unless care has been taken to select and preserve them. A poor potato is the poorest article of food that can be had; as soon as they begin to sprout they will begin to grow poor and watery, the better part of the root going to the support of sprouts; hence, to have mealy, nice potatoes, it is necessary to keep them from exhausting themselves in this way.
An exchange gives the following method of preventing the potatoes from sprouting, which we hope will be tried and approved: Take good sound potatoes, and place them in a tub or barrel, and pour boiling water over them, letting them remain in the water until the eyes are scalded; so they will not sprout; dry the potatoes thoroughly in the sun, and put them away in a box or barrel in a cool, dry place. This will give good mealy potatoes all the time.

Is Forney a Defaulter?
The Committee appointed to investigate the forty thousand dollars deficit in Forney's Senate accounts, report that "Samuel Wagner, who filled the office of financial clerk under Forney from April, 1863, till December, 1867, is undoubtedly responsible for the larger part of the deficit of $35,486;" that "he acknowledged a misapplication of $25,000 to his own use," but that "his explanations are not entirely satisfactory, as they have unaccounted for an amount of $12,000."
The sum of twelve thousand dollars, they say, still remains unaccounted for; but they hold Wagner responsible for it because he was financial clerk or disbursing officer under Forney. Both have resigned; but Forney only resigns on condition that a new clerk be elected to take his place. If this be a dodge previously agreed upon, he will continue to be clerk.

—Mr. Everts, who so ably defended the President, and so bitterly denounced the iniquity of impeachment, was the chief speaker at the Republican mass meeting which was held at the Cooper Institute, New York, on the 10th of October last.

What's in a Name?
We have a friend who rejoices in the eminently christian name of Emanuel. When he received his cognomen, an old aunt traveled several miles on foot to remonstrate with his parents for giving him such an "ungodly" name. They did not, however, heed the admonition, and he grew up with a name well calculated to produce a pious turn of mind whenever he wrote, heard or spoke it. It is not surprising, then, that he was often found at church on the day set aside for that purpose by the christian world. On one occasion, while intently listening to the preaching, his nose commenced bleeding. Being young, and constitutionally modest, he did not wish to disturb the congregation by going out, so he held on to his nasal organ with his handkerchief to stop the copious effusion. In the midst of his embarrassment, the minister gave out these lines:
"There is a fountain filled with blood
Drawn from Emanuel's veins."

The bashful young man could not stand what he regarded as a personal allusion, and made a bolt for the door, where he let out the pent up claret struggling for escape. On Sunday last Emanuel was a little late at his church. Just as he entered the door, the minister read:
"When Emanuel's face appears
My hope, my joy begins."

A smile illumined the features of a number of the congregation as they recognized him, and the pleasant coincidence between his name and the particular juncture of the ceremonies at which he entered. What's in a name?
Hard to please.
Pitts is a fast man, a sharp man, a business man, and when Pitts goes into a store to trade he always gets the lowest cash price, and he says—"Well, I'll look about and if I don't find anything that suits me better I'll call and take this."
Pitts, like all fast men, is partial to woman, and young ones in particular. Now getting rather "long in years, and guess I'll get married."
His business qualities wouldn't let him wait, so off he travels, and calling upon a lady friend, opened conversation by remarking that he would like to know what she thought about his getting married. "Oh, Mr. Pitts, that is an affair in which I am not so very greatly interested, and I prefer to leave it with yourself." But, says Pitts, "you are interested, and my dear girl, will you marry me?"
The young lady blushed very red, hesitated, and finally, as Pitts was very well to do in the world, and morally, financially and politically of good standing in society, she accepted him; whereupon the matter of fact Pitts responded—"Well, well, I'll look about, and if I don't find anybody that suits me better than you, I'll come back."

Mark Twains Turkish Lunch.
I never want another one. The cooking apparatus was in the little lunch room near the bazaar, and it was all open to the street. The cook was dirty, and so was the table, and it had no cloth on it. The fellow took a mass of sausage meat, and coated it round a wire and laid it on a charcoal fire to cook. When it was done he laid it aside, and a dog walked sadly in and nipped it. He smelt it first, and probably recognized the remains of a friend. The cook took it away from him and laid it before us. Brown said, "I pass." He plays euchre sometimes and we all passed in turn. Then the cook baked a broad, flat wheaten cake, greased it well with the sausage and started to bring it to us. It dropped in the dirt, and he picked it up and polished it on the seat of his breeches and laid it on before us. Brown said, "I pass." We all passed and called a new deal. He put some eggs in a frying pan, and stood pensively prying slabs of meat from his teeth with a fork. Then he used the fork to turn the eggs with, and brought them along. Brown said, "I pass." All followed suit. We did not know what to do, and so we ordered a new ration of sausage. The cook got out his wire, apportioned a proper amount of sausage meat, spit on his hands, and fell to work. This time, with one accord, we all passed out. We paid bill and then left. That is all I learned about lunches. A Turkish lunch is good, no doubt but it has its weak points.—Alta Californian.

Distinction on Account of Color.
The Radicals clamor for "equality before the law, without reference to color;" but in this State a Radical Legislature refused to allow the polls to be open after 6 o'clock in any election, thus compelling multitudes of honest laboring white men, who have, heretofore voted after a hard day's work was done, to lose part of a day's wages or to lose their vote. In the South, under the rule of the Radicals in Congress, the polls are kept open from three to seventeen days, and sometimes till midnight, to allow such negroes as choose to do so to vote in half a dozen different districts. That is a specimen of the political honesty and decency of the leaders of the Republican party.

Repudiation of Grant.
The Radicals emblazoned the picture of Grant on their tickets in New Hampshire and Connecticut, and the results were far from being encouraging. Then it was claimed that the whole West would go for him with a whirlwind of enthusiasm. Yet, when an important election took place in the metropolis of his own State, Chicago, which has been overwhelmingly radical for years, repudiated the silent smoker.
