A horse properly trained will always look to the rider or to the driver, in the time of fright, for protection; and instead of kicking and tearing everything to pieces, when scared, he will take courage, when he sees you standing by him, and feels your hand on his head or on the rein, put his trust in you, and regard you as his only hope in time of danger.

This was often illustrated during the war. All who served in the cavalry or strillery force have seen how terribly frightened a horse appeared the moment his rider stumbled from the saddle.
