How Marbles are Made.

The chief place for the manufacture of those little round pieces of stone which contribute so largely to the enjoyment of "Young America," is at Oberstein, on the Oahe, in Germany, where there are large agate mills and quarries, the refuse of which is carefully calcareous stone, which is first broken into blocks, nearly square, by blows with a hammer. These are thrown by the hundred into a sort of mill, threw herself into mamma's arms, weep which is formed of a flat stationary slab of stone, with a number of concentric furrows upon its face. A block of oak, or other hard wood, of the same diametric.

In about fifteen minutes the stones are tears burst forth anew. only three of these rude mills, will turn out sixty thousand marbles in each week. Agates are made into marbles at Oberstein, by first chipping the picces nearly round with a hammer, handled by a skillful workman, and then wearing the edge down upon the surface of a large grindstone.—Manufacturer.

The Sunflower for Bean Poles.

Mr. John R. Woods, of Winchester, Ill. communicates to the Independent his approval of the method of training Lima beans mentioned in a recent issue of that rit is a good plan as well as an economical one, and is the one I have practiced for many years, but I know of a better and much cheaper method. It is to plant and use for the purpose the poor man's flower—I mean the Sunflower, which is peculiarly entitled to the name I have given it.

"It is the first useful plant that comes up in the spring, and by the time you can safely plant your beans it is six inches in beight. It grows rapidly, and the bean will climb the stock vigorously.

"My plan is to pull off the leaves of the sunflower as the vinces of the bean reach them. These leaves make capital rood for milk cows. In our soil the Helian thus grows to a height of 12 to 14 feet, bears a profuse crop of seed, which is excellent for laying hens. When the stock ripens it should be cut down and put away underse shelter for kindling wood in the winter. I would therefore commend the sunflow-rand warman's bureau for a bit of soft, white

In England, according to the London Field, the best horsemen frequently administer powdered charcoal to horses for any affection of the respiratory organs.
