The Albatross.

This sea-bird is always associated in our minds with Coleridge's "Ancient Ma-riner," which has made almost universal sacred bird. As the eagle is called the king of birds so the albatross might be called the queen; for those who are familiar with it say that it is exceedingly out of his mouth and the life out of his stately on wing, and its expression and action dignified, mild, and unfearing when cantured. The eve of the albatross the sailors' superstition as to its being a ery other throne in Europe has changed when captured. The eye of the albatross the gazene, and has an expression of pa-thos and intelligence which is singularly beets at $3 per ton for sugar-making, attractive, The feathers are either pure than they can in raising wheat or any white or delicately penciled and speckled, other kind of grain. which are mostly black. It sometimes weighs twenty lbs., and has twelve feet stretch of wing. It sits on the water light and graceful as a swan, and will dive unfor a long way, like running ostrich, before it can get the proper momentum and soar aloft; but once it is fairly up, and its pinions quite free, it cleaves the air with exceeding swiftness, and skims the waves like the smallest swallow, with perfect ease and grace. When the ocean is calm, the bird is seen sporting in the sunbeams on the glassy waves; but its revel is the storm when it durts its arrows way be. on the glassy waves; but its revel is the storm, when it darts its arrowy way before the fury of the tempest. It is then in its proper element, and seems to delight in breasting and mocking the surges of the sea. The food of the albatross consists of small marine animals, mucilaginous zoophtes, the spawn of fish, etc.; but its chief delight is whales blubber. When breeding, the female seeks some inaccessible rock or lonely spot of ground, lays seldom more than one egg, and build a nest around that, consisting of sticks and long grass, about two feet high. All this time the male watches, and tends her with great assiduity, bringing her the daintiest morsals from the deep. A sail.

A Physician on the Stand.

The standard legal dictionaries in use may be searched in vain for more accurate definitions of legal terms than those recently given by a physican in Pulaski, Tennesse, as reported to us by a leading member of the bar of that place. Mr. B. a Mr. L., opposing counsel in a pending case, were engaged in taking depositions to be used on the trial of the cause. The question as to a certain woman's sound-ness of mind being in controversy, a physician was called as a medical expert, and during his examination the following diologue took place:
