In the morning I awoke early, as indeed I did nearly every hour during the night, fearing to oversleep, and at once glanced at the little table, where all as yet was just as I left it, and lay quietly awaiting the discovery of the box by Mrs. Flackewhite—which could not now be long delayed when I should feign the foundest slumber. In a little while she moved, and seeing me, as she supposed, fast asleep, quietly arose, and—just as I had hoped and saw through half-closed eyelids—she noticed the box at once, walked towards it read the address to be self on the letter, and with a smile of wonder and curiosity opened it, and I watched her read it slowly to the very
