Loet's Corner.

Don't Stay Out Late To-Night, The heart of home is beaming With rays of rosy light; And loving eyes are gleaming, As falls the shades of night; And while thy steps are leaving That circle pure and bright, A tender voice, half grieving,

The world in which thou movest Is busy, brave and wide: The world of her thou lovest Is at her ingle side; She waits for thy warm greeting Thy smile is her delight; Her gentle voice entreating,

Says, "don't stay late to-night."

The world, cold and inhuman, Will spurn thee if thou fall; The love of one pure woman Outlasts and shames them all; Thy children will cling 'round thee, Let thte be dark or bright: At home no shaft can wound thee-Then "Don't stay late to-night."

Says, "Don't stay late to-night."

Things that Never Die. The pure, the bright the beautiful That stirred our hearts in youth The impulse to a wordless prayer, The dreams of love and truth; The longings after something lost, The spirit's yearning cry, The strivings after better hopes-These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to aid A brother in his need, The kindly word in grief's dark hour That proves a friend indeed-The plea for mercy, softly breathed When justice threatens high, The sorrow of a contrite heart-These things can never die.

The memory of a clasping hand, The pressure of a kisa, And all the trifles, sweet and fleet, That made up love's first bliss If with a firm unchanging faith And holy trust and high, Those hands have clasped, those lips have These things shall never die.

The cruel and the bitter word, That wounded as it fell: The chilling want of sympathy, We feel but never tell; The hard repulse, that chills the heart, Whose hopes were bounding high, In an unfading record kept-These things shall never die.

Lct nothing pass; for every hand Must find some work to do; Lose not a enance to water 1076; Be firm, and just, and true; So shall a light that cannot fade, Beam on thee from on high,

THE STORY OF A VALENTINE.

When my friend, Captain Terrible, United States navy, dines at my plain table, I am always a little abashed. I know that he has been accustomed always to a variety of wines and sauces, and a cigarette after each course, and to a cookery that would kill an undeveloped American. So, when the Captain turns the castors round three times before sclecting his condiment, and when his eyes seem kend; but his quick and foolish pride in their unchanging regard known to each other.

"Henry went to college early. At the breakfast-table, but he next morning, she received from him a magnificent valentine. All at once she take in stopping at marriage. A somewhat complicated and certainly very strange case of theft, repentance and a just punishment is reported from the interior of New York. A respectable girl, the daughter of a farmer, went into the service of a family in a neighboring village to her home as a server. lage to her home as a servant. Her employer was a small merchant, but a man of supposed honesty and integrity. One day while working in the bedroom of her employer a roll of bills fell from the peckemployer a roll of bills fell from the pock-et of his coat, which the girl picked up, and being, as she afterwards said, "temp-ted by the devil," appropriated the sum to her own use. On examination of her prize she found it to consist of $67 in dif-ferent sized bill. Although suspected of the theft it could not be proved against her, and so one day the girl started for a neighboring town to spend some of all her money.

On making her purchases, and offering the stolen bills in payment, they were found to be counterfeits, and she was advised to destroy them. She then visited these or more other stores, and with the three or more other stores, and with the same result. At last she went to the bank, and had the bills examined, but was again told they were counterfeit. She then started to walk to her home, which reached after several hours of travel. A person who had heard of the theft, and saw her produce the roll of bills, informed her employer of her doings in the town, and on her arrival she was threatened with arrest, but asher parents stated that in turn they would cause the employ-er's arrest for having counterfeit money in his possession the affair was allowed to rest. The next evening while in attendance at a Methodist revisal and claiming to have found religion, told the story of her theft, her attempt to pass the bills and their being counterfeit, also gave her em-ployer's name. She then fell to the ground in a fit, and, being carried to an adjoining house, was soon pronounced to have a severe attack of brain fever.
