Management of Balking Horses.

The following excellent letter on the management of balking horses, we copy from February number of the Practical Farmer...

The first and better way is never to have a balking horse. If horses are handled properly they will never balk. After a horse has been "fooled," as horsemen very properly say, when a good horse balks...

After a horse has really contracted the habit of balking, the vice can be corrected only by kindness and gentle treatment. The more he is whipped, kicked, clubbed, and handled roughly, the more obstinate he will be...

Always provide some means to enable a team to start a heavy load safely. Avoid stopping—if possible—where it will be difficult to start. It is better to let a team stop for a moment, than when hauling a load up a slope, than to allow it to stop in a place where it would be difficult to start...

The Use of Lime.

A limestone soil is known for its fertility; also its durability. It will also grow a great variety both of grain and grasses; the lime grass finds its home here. This is also the soil for wheat, for barley, for corn, and indeed what will not grow on rich limestone soil?

All these points to what we are to do. We are to lime our land, and we are to do it plentifully and periodically, for lime will naturally work down in most soils if not in all, and thus in a few years be of no more avail. This is our disadvantage in not having a limestone soil; we must be restoring it. But it is for our advantage, decidedly, and therefore we ought to do it.

Such is our experience. Only do not use enough lime, enough generally at a time, but mostly in its periodic application. Apply now during the fall or winter, any time. But the fall or winter is a time to scatter it on the plowed land and have its effect there with the frost and the elements, so that when the spring comes for harrowing there will not only a mellow condition but a benefit; and the summer through this will go on. It will not hurt any if there is enough to whiten the field, as is sometimes seen, but it will favor the crop and the land in a drowth, as it will reflect instead of absorb the sun's rays. But meadow and pasture will receive it in the fall or winter equally well; and if the ground is not frozen, a little harrowing will be of advantage, and where manure is applied with the lime this should be done. But spread fine, close and even, both manure and lime. Make this an important point for such it is. You want all your substances which you add to the soil diffused through it, becoming part of it. In lumps this cannot be even if the lumps are quite small they want to be pulverized.—Chr. Country Gentleman.

A correspondent of an English paper advocating the protection of the crow, states that, having shot crows in a cornfield, he opened their stomachs, in expecting to find them full of wheat. On the contrary, he discovered that they contained a large number of caterpillars, whose ravages upon the crop were quite evident. Before farmers become perfectly ruthless in their destruction of birds round their farms it might be well for them to repeat this experiment, and ascertain which are their friends and which are their enemies.

Frank Bird maintains that the phrases "sit down" and "sit up" are proper. He says he used to "sit up" with a gal thirty years ago.

To take the stain of any fruit from any fabric, put the garment in a vessel, pour boiling water over it, and let it stand till cold, then wash out, and the stain is gone.
