REMEDY FOR RUST IN WHEAT.—The following from a distinguished agriculturist, is taken from a Bremen paper; For thirty years I have found this method successful in preventing rust in wheat. Some hours, at the longest six or eight, before sowing, prepare a steep of three measures of powdered quick lime and ten measures of cattle urine. Pour two quarts of this upon a peck of wheat, stir with a spade until every kernel is covered white with it. By using wheat so prepared rust of every kind will be avoided. I have often noticed while in the neighboring fields

Some deem it an absurdity to assert that draining the water from the soil can be beneficial to crops, during a protracted draught, yet such is the fact, as every one knows who has tosted the matter on soil where the texture was such as the hold the water a foot or more below. trate the power of science to overcome ter on soil where the texture was such as to hold the water a foot or more below the surface. Such land, before draining, becomes baked and hard; no fertilizing influences comeany to invigorate the roots and develop plant growth; but draw this water off, and a speedy change for the better will be seen in the character of the soil, and in the plants whose seeds were committed to it. As the country is more and more divested of forest coverings, the drier will be the fructifying of season, and the greater necessity of drainage to countered in benefit of drainage does not stop here, for, in the event of a wet spring, seeding can be forwarded two or three weeks as a consequence of it, while vegetation will be saided during the entire season, whatever its character may be.

Some eight tubs were good, sound, yellow butter; some eight more of it was very light colored and soft, with a disagreeable had to be put down through the wrecks of no less than three steamboats which flavor; some four tubs shaded down from yellow to white, and the color the index of quality. Careful investigation developed the fact that the good butter w.s made from grass feed; and the poor, later in the season, when the grass had failed from drought, and the cows lived upon briars and leaves. A man changed the feed of his cows from corn meal and hay to potatoes and hay; it lessened the quantity of butter, and the color was lighter. Hence the importance of good feed. It is profitable to feed corn meal at all times except when the grass is new and plenty, and it is not lost then.
