

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

FOR AUDITOR GENERAL, GEN. WILLIAM MCANDLESS, OF PHILADELPHIA.

FOR SURVEYOR GENERAL, CAPT. JAMES H. COOPER, OF LAWRENCE COUNTY.

A Full Poll of the Democratic Vote will secure the Election of Our State Ticket by a Large Majority.

Democratic Convention.

The Democratic voters of Susquehanna county are requested to meet at the place of holding elections in their respective districts between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock P. M., on Saturday the 19th day of August next.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE.

- ADAMS.—William White, D. Linabury, Daniel Seely.
ARLINGTON.—William Creigh, P. Fitzmartin, Timothy Kane.
ANANIAS.—B. H. Dix, N. J. West, L. O. Baldwin.

UP AND AWAKE.

The importance which attaches to a full attendance at the primary delegate meetings to be held on Saturday next, cannot be too highly estimated.

The Unkindest Cut of all.

We do not intend to fight over again the political contest of 1859, for the gratification of the editor of the Montrose Democrat, or of the renegade Republican whom a lack of brains has constrained him to employ to write his editorials.

Another Ticket in the Field.

The advocates of a Temperance party in Pennsylvania met in convention on Wednesday and nominated prohibition candidates for State officers, as follows:

Trouble at Washington.

There is trouble in the happy family at Washington. Commissioner Pleasanton refused to resign, and threatened to make known strange things if Grant insisted on his removal.

The Kentucky Election.

The Kentucky election, which took place on Monday, the 7th, resulted in a Democratic triumph of from twenty to thirty thousand majority, or about the same as last year, when the majority was 31,000.

Two Hundred and Forty-Four Millions.

Two hundred and forty-four millions of money wrong, wrung, extorted from the people in 1870 to pay two hundred and seventy million of bonds which would have become due in 1865!

Royalty at a Discount.

Price of Wales and heir apparent to the crown of Britain, is not surrounded by the "dignity that doth hedge a king."

Obligatory Ballot.

Some of our German exchanges says the Four Quarters, of both political complexes, are urging the passing of a law making the exercise of the right to vote obligatory.

Robbing the Government.

The Washington Patriot calls attention to a system of robbing the Government of the United States more audacious than that from which the city of New York is suffering.

The Potato Bug.

We notice from some of our exchanges that the potato bug, which has proved such a pest in the fields of the West for the past few years, has already made its appearance in this section, though happily too late to do any material damage the present season.

Death of Phoebe Cary.

While the death of Alice Cary is even yet fresh in the memory, we are called upon to chronicle the demise of her sister Phoebe, who though less gifted, was one of the worthiest female writers of the country.

The Young Girl Who Boasted a Man.

The following is taken from the New Orleans Picayune of the 20th of July: In going through the parish prison a few days since, the attention of the reporter was attracted to a young girl, apparently not more than fifteen years of age.

Republican Convention.

The delegates to the Republican convention met at the Court House on Monday last, and after a stormy session put in nomination the following officers: Senator, L. P. Fitch of Montrose.

Narrow Gauge.

George Brader, of the firm of Brown & Brader, of White Haven, engaged in the manufacture of lumber, is building a narrow gauge railroad from the mill of that firm to their timber land, for the purpose of carrying the logs from the woods to the mill.

Complimentary.

The Binghamton "Republican" in commenting upon the game of ball played at that place on Friday last, gives the Montrose boys the following compliment:

Local Intelligence.

Business Notices.

Wm. Duffum, Friendsville advertises by Hand bills a great reduction in the prices of Merchandise. Cheap is the Watchword.
S. B. Chase & Co., have opened a Savings Bank at New Milford. See advertisement.

Important Discovery.

Colonel Hooten and Hon. John Hickman, of West Chester, assert that they have discovered a substance which, at a cost of twenty-five cents a barrel, will preserve apples, peaches, pears, potatoes, cantelopes, tomatoes, cucumbers, watermelons, and many other fruits and vegetables, a year or more as fresh as when taken from the vines.—Exchange

The Latest Dodge.

This is positively the latest dodge in villainy. A chap in a certain city, being dreadfully hard up for a pair of boots, hit upon this method of getting an outfit. He can imitate a screed at first rate, and so he went into the backyard of a house a few nights ago, and carefully unrolling his boots, began a most infernal howl.

Fic Nics.

Several places were held last week at different places. The one announced by the Episcopal Sabbath School came off at Hart Lake on Thursday, under very pleasant circumstances. The weather was of the most favorable character, and the attendance full, and the enjoyment full. Boat sailing, fishing, feasting, song and unrestrained merriment was the order of the day, and all came home feeling improved both in mind, body and soul by a day of such pleasant recreation.

Republican Convention.

The delegates to the Republican convention met at the Court House on Monday last, and after a stormy session put in nomination the following officers: Senator, L. P. Fitch of Montrose. Representatives, E. B. Beardslee of Little Meadows, and Samuel Falkenberg of Susquehanna Depot; Associate Judge, James W. Chapman, of Montrose; District Attorney, James E. Carmalt of Bridgewater; Treasurer, Tracy Hayden of New Milford; County Commissioner, Oscar Washburn, of Gibson; Auditor, Martin Clain of Bridgewater.

Narrow Gauge.

George Brader, of the firm of Brown & Brader, of White Haven, engaged in the manufacture of lumber, is building a narrow gauge railroad from the mill of that firm to their timber land, for the purpose of carrying the logs from the woods to the mill. It will have a gauge of thirty-two inches, and the motive power will be supplied by a locomotive similar to those used in mines. In the event of its proving a success it will be extended from the mill to the Leckwanna and Susquehanna railroad, taking the place of the present plank road.—Susquehanna Democrat.

Complimentary.

The Binghamton "Republican" in commenting upon the game of ball played at that place on Friday last, gives the Montrose boys the following compliment: "The visitors were a gentlemanly set of young fellows, and made many friends as well by their modest, quiet demeanor, as by their skill in yielding the willow. Score 40 to 33."

Enigmas.

Mr. ENTORR.—I submit the following for some of your readers to solve: I am composed of ten (10) letters. My 8, 7, 10, is a healthy beverage. My 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, is an interjection of the body. My 1, 4, and 9, will suggest themselves. My whole is the name of a town in Susquehanna county, Pa. G. T. F.

Base Ball.

A match game was played on Friday last, at Binghamton, between the "Montrose Club" and a "Picked Nine," of Binghamton, which resulted in the following score: PICKED NINE BING'TN. MONTROSE B. B. CLUB. Wilson, a. s. 2 Tarbell, c. 2 7. Wheeler, b. 3 4 Scarle, a. s. 4. Sedgwick, l. f. 4 4 Hager, p. 5 3. Jefferson, c. f. 4 Hayden, r. f. 2 5. Hays, h. 3 1 5 Backster, s. 1 5. Shipman, 1st. 4 4 Pickering, l. f. 3 3. Hays, j. c. 2 Clarke, 2d. 4 3. McCand, r. 3 Rose, 1st. 2 3.

New Diocese.

A Wilkes-Barre correspondent of the "Scranton Republican" says: "Bishop Stevens officiated yesterday at St. Stephen's Church. He preached last evening the last sermon he is expected to preach as bishop of the diocese. The division of the diocese, soon to be made, will place this city in the part which, it is rumored, will be in charge of Dr. Coleman, of Mouch Chunk, who is mentioned as the gentleman, most likely to become the bishop. Bishop Stevens will remain in the old diocese, and will, it is supposed, continue his residence in Philadelphia."

Thermometer 90 degrees in the shade to-day.

While the death of Alice Cary is even yet fresh in the memory, we are called upon to chronicle the demise of her sister Phoebe, who though less gifted, was one of the worthiest female writers of the country. She died at Newport, Rhode Island, July 31, after a distressing illness of two months. Unlike her sisters, all of whom inherited a consumptive tendency from their mother, the health of the subject of this sketch had always been remarkably good, and her death was so unexpected as to almost shock those to whom she was intimately known. Her health began to fail her in June, and she finally went to Newport, in hopes that a change of air would prove beneficial, where the grim messenger finally overtook her. We are indebted to the N. Y. Tribune for the following brief sketch of the life of the poetess: "The life of Miss Cary was so inseparably blended with that of her sister Alice, that their biography would seem almost identical. She was born five years later than her sister, but they began to write for the press at about the same time, and during the twenty-five years that their names were before the public as authors they were so closely associated that few ever thought of one without also thinking of the other. And yet, in spite of the mutual sympathy that bound them to each other closely, they were very unlike, not only in person, but in mental constitution. Such was the difference in their style that no poem of the one was ever attributed, even in a moment of forgetfulness, to the other. Born in 1825, eight miles north of Cincinnati, she first became known to the public as a contributor to the periodicals of the Universalist denomination, and afterward more widely as a writer in The National Era, at Washington. She has written far less copiously than her sister, and almost nothing in prose. Of the 'Poems of Alice and Phoebe Cary,' published in Philadelphia in 1850, only about one-third were written by the last named. Her next venture was in 'Poems of Paradise,' a volume all her own, published by Ticknor & Fields in 1854; but her latest and best work was 'Poems of Faith, Hope and Love,' published by Hayd & Houghton in 1868. We have said her latest, and we must not forget the important aid she rendered Dr. Deems in the compilation of 'Hymns for all Christians,' published by Hurd & Houghton in 1869. Her poems are marked by a buoyant faith, a sunny philosophy, and a hearty attractiveness of manner, which no one ever succeeded in affecting, and no one who possesses them could afford to barter for wealth or fame. Phoebe came to New York with Alice in 1855 or 1853, and here they lived together until they were so lately separated by death. Few homes are more attractive than theirs, ever in the most favorable terms to those who were so fortunate as to share its gracious hospitality. The Young Girl Who Boasted a Man. The following is taken from the New Orleans Picayune of the 20th of July: In going through the parish prison a few days since, the attention of the reporter was attracted to a young girl, apparently not more than fifteen years of age. She had fair but brown hair, and a complexion as fresh and glowing as that of a young beauty, and her eyes were singularly soft and intelligent, and her whole appearance indicated the free joyous characteristics of youth and happiness. Yet this amiable looking creature, this fair, delicate Minerva of slender form and ingenious face, is said to be a devil incarnate. She was not a prisoner, only a visitor to the institution, and when the reporter saw her she was conversing with a noted burglar; indeed, she is a cousin of Pete Monday's, and goes under the sobriquet of Lily. She is almost as fair and delicate as one. Her career is a remarkable series of adventures and escapes. About a year ago, she lived in San Antonio, Texas, and for some real or fancied misconduct received a severe castigation at the hands of the man in authority. She fled from the place with whom she was living, burning with resentment and conscious of her inability to cope with him in physical strength, she waited until the next night when he was asleep, and then locking the doors of the room and closing every avenue of escape, she prepared for a work of horror almost impossible to conceive. On one pretext or another she sent all the inmates of the house away, and procuring paper and other inflammable material, she kindled a funeral pyre around the bed of the sleeping man. This done, she set fire to it, and locking the door behind her, fled the house. The man woke up and found the house was full of flames, and escaping from the room was literally roasted. One side of his body was burned almost to a cinder. He has never recovered from his injuries, and is to-day a helpless invalid, suffering excruciating torture and continual anguish. His generosity, perhaps his sense of atonement—prevented his prosecuting the girl, and she made her escape to New Orleans. Arriving there, she took apartments on Toulouse street, between Rampart and Burgundy, where she still resides. She is yet very young, certainly not more than seventeen at the furthest, her vindictive and savage fury when excited is a terror to all her acquaintances. It is strange that beneath an exterior so fair and beautiful should be concealed the element of such lawless violence. The State election in Kentucky was held on Monday the 7th. Returns received indicate a comfortable Democratic majority of 35,000. The Legislature is almost unanimously Democratic. I can say with truth, and with un-speakable comfort, that I never did enjoy a relative to office.—Thos. Jefferson. I've appointed very nice boys—not over Thirty-five, so far.—U. S. Grant. A dyspeptic read that by sending a dollar by mail he would receive a cure for dyspepsia. He sent the money, and received a slip with the following printed on it: "Stop drinking and hoe in the garden." The man was mad at first, then laughed, and finally went to hoeing, and stopped drinking, and is now, as well as ever. An entomologist who has been camping in the country a few days, writes as follows respecting the grasshopper: "The versatile and ubiquitous grasshopper is congregating in the meadows now, and is calmly chewing his cud on swollen stocks and thistles, while he rubs his hind legs together in ecstasy, and expectorates tobacco juice in the eyes of the turkey who tries to prey upon him."
