Zoet's Corner.

SHILE WHENER YOU CAN. When things don't go to sult you, And the world seems upside down, Don't waste your time in fretting, But drive away that frown, Since life is oft perplexing Tis much the wisest plan To bear all trials bravely,

Why should you dread to-morrow, And thus dispoil to-day? For when you borrow trouble. You always have to pay. It is a good old maxim, Which should be often preached Don't cross the bridge before you. Before the bridge is reached.

And smile when'er you can.

You might be spared much sighing. If you would keep in mind The thought that good and evil Are always here combined. There must be something wanting. And though you roll in wealth You may miss from your casket

That precious jewel-bealth. And though you're strong and sturdy You may have an empty purse; (And earth has many trials, Which I consider worse!)

But whether joy or sorrow Fills up your mortal span, Twill make your pathway brighter To smile when'er you can. CROQUET.

BY JOHN Q. NICOLAY. How I rue the day when I played croquet! That game with the tape of wire, With the fancy mauls, and the rolling balls, Lost me my heart's desire. I'm beat by a blonde, that festive Hal,

Called witching Jenny Lake, Who wore more stripes on her balmoral Than shone on the painted stake. She played croquet with a winning way,

This damsel young and fair; With a smile so cute, and a high-lie And a rose in her floating hair: Such thrills of song, and such bursts of mirtl All for my own sweet sake, Till I thought a rainbow touched the earth

Where she stood by the painted stake. I fell in love like a turtle-dove, And cooed and wooed her well; But I fell in hate at her croquet mate, And called him a cheeky swell, If he had not been, what did he mean Buch a liberty to take

As to steal a kiss, and insult the miss Till she blushed like the painted stake. Ah! the game's all up, and my bitter cup Is filled by a frowning tate; For at church to-day, so the papers say, Give married the man I hate.

For that beaming blonde in the balmoral, For treacherous Jenny Lake, With a heart of ire in a martyr-fire

I burn at the painted stake. Old Letters I sit with letters on my knees

And in a weary task engage; To try and learn, by degrees, The correspondence of an age. Of these epistles, some with tears,

And some with laughter overflow While others tell of hopes and fears, And joys departed long ago, This hufried scrawl from Cousin James In agitated mind composed,

The interesting fact proclaims, That he has recently proposed. These loving words, almost efused "I long, my boy, tor your return,"

Were by a mother's fingers traced—
Ah me! how dim these candles burn In one jink envelope I find A little dead forget-me-not, Whose withered netals call to mind

An incident well nigh forgot. For once a pretty blue-eyed maid Selected it from her boquet, And to the upper room we strayed,

And up the staircase wound our way I vowed to keep this faded weed-At twenty-one such fools we are! I'll burn the rubbish and proceed-To light another choice cigar.

One Name. Upon the silver shining sand, A maiden wrote with loving band, One name—no more The waves crept up with steady aim, And washed away the little name,

Far from the shore. Then with a pen of finer art, She wrote sgain deep in her heart One name—no more. But fear and doubt, and wounded pride. Soon drowned within the crimson tide

The word she bore. "Yet," said the maid, "through grief and One name—no more." Still I write on my living brain But want and care, and added years, Buried in depths of bitter tears The sign she wore.

Then cried the maid in wild despair, "Is there no safe place anywhere, By sea or shore,
In brain or heart?" The answer came, God keepeth safe thy lover's name, Forevermore.

Brevities and Witicisms.

The Prince of Wales, in a recent speech at a dinner given in aid of the London Children's Hospital, said: "There is one fact, gentlemen, to which I wish to draw your attention—namely, that one third of the adult population of this country never arrives at maturity."
