We are permitted to copy the following history of Rush township from Miss Blackman's forth-coming History of Susquehanna County : • quehanna County: RUSH. [The fifth of those townships of old Luzerne of which the area was comprised wholly, or in part, of territory afterwards set off to Susquehanna county.] 1801. At January Sessions of the Court of Luzerne county, a petition was pre-sented for the erection of a new township to be called Rush, its boundaries to ex-tend form the 40th to the 27th milestane tend from the 40th to the 27th milestone on the State line-the northwest corner of old Lawsville-thence south eighteen miles to a corner in the line north of old Wyalusing township, south of Wysox, to a point due east from Standing Stone, thence north five miles to a corner, thence north five miles, thence to the place of horn nive miles, thence to the place of beginning. Viewers then appointed, made their report in November following. Though it wis accepted, it is evident, from the bounds of the township as ever afterwards recognized, that an error oc-curred in their statement of the limits of the northern line—"To begin at the 41st milestone and extend thirteen miles to the 28th milestone"—thus failing to reach Lawsville by one mile. [The milestones were numbered from the Delware River westward.] Also, upon the Derward River Susquehanna county, its west line extend south from the 40th milestone, and from all that can now be ascertained, the west line of Rush was the county line for thirteen miles; five miles square remained in Bradtord (then Ontario) county. The

tion of Susquehanna:

Practically the township extended east to the line of old Nicholson, and south at least to the line of Susquehanna county, as afterwards run. A portion of Brain trim (now Auburn) may be excepted; but the taxables of Rush,* for the year 1801, included residents of Springville
