"Good boatman, prithee haste thee, I seek my fatherland!"
"Stay, when I there have placed thee, Dare I demand thy hand?"
"A maiden's head can never So hard a point decide;
Row on, row on, for ever I'd have thee by my side."

The happy bridal over,
The wanderer ceased to roam,
For seated by her lover,
The boat became her home;
And still they sang together.
As steering o'er the tide,
"Row on through wind and weat ugh wind and weather.

We roamed together years ago,
And marked each spot that intervenes,
Where cowalips peep and dailes grow;
But, ah, tney smiled not as of old,
And every nook was sadly changed;
The warmth of all the past is cold,
Since time has you and me estranged.

That rises from the rich, dark ground,
Where mottled flowers of tipy bloom
Their gentle souls exhale around;
But ab, their sweets no more were drawn
With eager breath, and all seemed changes

about her health; and, after the profession all conversation was finished, we fell into a general and pleasant chat.

She was delightfully frank, and said, while we were discussing men and matrimoney:

"I was funds twas little."

"That is bad," I replied. I had been admiring your grand, queenly proportions ever since you came in; and now you ago it all by showing that you are not grateful for such noble gifta."

"Can't help it; I wish I didn't weigh more than eighty pounds, and wasn't more than eighty pounds, and wasn't more than eighty pounds, and wasn't more than four and a half feet high."

"Well, I am shocked; do tell me what makes you wish so."
