Mean Musketoes.

As they will ere long announce an advent by putting in their bills, we rise to explain that an enthusiastic entomologist has kept two vigorous musketoes under an inverted tumbler for six months without food, and they remain in a healthy condition. This clearly proves that their annoyance of mankind is entirely uncalled for, and not at all necessary for their sustenance.

Making Cows give Milk.

An experienced agricultural editor vouches for the following, handed by a friend: If you desire to get a large yield of milk give your cow, three times a day, slightly warm, salted, in which bran has been stirred at the rate of one quart to two gallons of water. You will find that your cow will gain twenty-five per cent. immediately under the effect of it, and she will become so attached to the diet as to refuse to drink clear water, unless very thirsty, but this mess she will drink almost at any time, and ask for more. The amount of this drink is an ordinary pailful at each time, morning, noon and night. Your animal will then do her best at discounting the lacteal.

Reliable Rule.

As we are aware that there are many persons who would be thankful for a certain way of testing the genuineness of greenbacks, we publish the following which it is claimed is some test: To discover spurious greenbacks or national bank notes, divide the last two figures of the number of the bill by four, and if one remains the letter on the genuine will be A; if two remains it will be B; if three, C; and should there be no remainder the letter will be D. For example, a note is registered 2,461; divide sixty-one by four and there will be one remaining. According to the rule the letter on the note will be A. In case the rule fails, be certain that the note is counterfeit.

Credit this Exception.

It is generally believed that there is not a single redeeming feature appertaining to the inordinate use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage. But we recently read of an eccentric exception, which although not occurring in our county, is deserving of record. It is told of a festive fellow who never gets tight without spending all the money he has about him in presents for his wife. He buys shawls, cloaks, dresses, household goods, groceries, everything that a wife and family need, and packs them home. There is a degree of compensation in this that would reconcile most women to an occasional marital spree. There are two distinguished advantages about it from a feminine point of view. The wife thus not only gets her presents as a compensation, but when the goods come home in this promiscuous way, she knows exactly what it means and can prepare for it.

Important Item.

The cultivation of cabbage last year in many localities was attended with much annoyance and accompanied in many instances by a total loss of crops, by the appearance of a new enemy and terrible devastator of the cabbage. In the department of agricultural reports for 1870 we find the following interesting and valuable information concerning the appearance in the United States of this terrible destroyer of cabbage and other garden truck, as also recommendations for practically and successfully suborning the enemy. The report says: A butterfly has lately made its appearance in the neighborhood of New York and Long Island which is new to the gardeners there, caterpillars of which have already done very great damage. The insect is the common butterfly of Europe, Pieris rapæ, called by the Canadians ver a coeur, or heart worm, from the habit it has not only of eating the outside leaves, but of destroying the heart of the cabbage.

Condition of Crops.

The April report from our Agriculture Department at Washington, on the condition of winter grain, says: The low temperature in the month of March, and the accumulation of winter snow and ice, have retarded the springing of vegetable life and tinged with gloom the views of the local reporters. Over a large area, at the date of the reports, snow still covered deeply the grain fields, and only conjecture, founded on the forwardness and vigor of plants at the opening of winter, and on the mechanical condition of the soil, and the severity of the season, could point to the probable status of the winter grain. The general tenor of the report carries the idea not of sweeping destruction by freezing, but of injury by thinning out—by killing in spots and pathes and especially by retarding an early start and vigorous growth. In many cases the plants, apparently dead, were only sleeping, unpromising in appearance, but firmly rooted, and ready, with favoring warmth and sunshine, to start into sure and steady, if not rapid growth. Where the fields were drained, the soil deep and mellow, the casualities of winter have been unknown. Where seeding was done with the drill on land having any fair degree of suitable preparation, almost absolutely immunity from loss by freezing has been secured. The April returns, as a whole, indicate rather more than the average amount of winter killing, retarded growth and stunted appearance; but a sound condition of the roots of the plants in suitable soil or that covered uniformly with snow which with favoring weather, may secure a vigorous growth and a good yield. The report is filled with extracts from correspondence, illustrating the condition of winter grain in the various States from which the above points are derived. The reports from New York in the early part of the month were not very cheerful in tone, the snow of ice not having disappeared, but indicated a probable improvement under the influences of fine weather, the plants being generally alive. Most of the New Jersey returns represent the ground as poorly covered with snow, while the temperature was low and the ground deeply frozen. The reports from Pennsylvania refer to the severity of the weather and the depth of freezing. The fly is reported in several counties. Lack of weather protection caused severe injury in Delaware. South of Maryland and Virginia, little wheat is grown, and rye is mainly for winter pasture. The returns received from those States generally, represent less than an average of grain. The accounts from other places South are various—some promising, others gloomy. In Texas there are indications of increased attentions to cereals, pointing to an enlarged area to be harvested this season. The Western returns generally are unpromising as to the appearance of winter grain. Returns from the Pacific coast nearly all favorable, but in California and Oregon.

Newspaper Borrower.

A country cotemporary is very severe on newspaper borrowers, and such censure often goes the rounds of the press. But it is a compliment, though perhaps an empty one, to persistently borrow a paper, and one of the aims of its publication is reached—the dissemination of knowledge. There is another side of the question to which newspaper conductors are not indifferent. Journals do not grow in the night like mushrooms. All the week, men toil to produce the weekly paper. Every type mark on it is the result of various labor, which has to be paid and fed. In this connection the subscriber pays a more substantial compliment than the borrower. If every member of the Democratic party should subscribe for his county paper, he would only pay his not very ongerous share of the expense of maintaining and spreading his own principles. And if, when he has subscribed for the paper, he lend it to his neighbor, he does a good and useful act. We do not object to lending or borrowing of newspapers. When every Democrat takes his share of the expense of producing the best of all public documents, a Democratic newspaper, it will be a further good office to lend it to as many as want to read it. A little thought will show what an immense impulse this would give to the Democratic cause, yet the cost to each Democrat is but the price of what to an intelligent man is one of the necessaries of life—a newspaper.

Rights of Married Women.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania last winter passed the following Act, securing to married women their seperate earnings, which has been approved by the Governor, and is now the law of the land:

That the seperate earnings of any married woman of Pennsylvania, whether said earnings shall be as wages for labor, salary, property, business or otherwise, shall accrue to and insure seperate benefit and use of said married woman, and be under the control of such married woman, independently of her husband, and so as not to be subject to any legal claim of such husband, or to the claims of any creditor or creditors of such husband, the same as if such married woman were a feme sole: Provided, that in any suit at law or in equity, in which the ownership of such property, under this act, shall be compelled, in the first instance, to show title and ownership in the same.

Sec. 2. That to prevent any fraudulent practices under this act, before any married woman shall be entitled to its benefits, she shall first present her petition, under oath or affirmation, to the court of common pleas of the city, or county where she resides, stating her intention of thereafter claiming the benefits of this act, whereupon the said court shall direct her petition aforesaid to be marked, filed, and to be recorded in the office for recording deeds of such city and county; and such records shall be conclusive evidence of the right of such married woman to the benefit of the first section of this act,

Gibson Items.

—Spring has returned in all her beauty and loveliness, the trees spread their foliage as if by magic, the grass and flowers put forth their leaves eager to catch the first rays of the rising sun the birds seem to vie with us in enjoying the scenes spread before us by Old Spring, who seems to-day as young as ever. The lowing herds on the hill sides seem to find real enjoyment in nipping the tender grass, after a long and tedious Winter, and all living things seem to praise the Great Creator, who spread these beautiful prospects before us for our enjoyment, but I was going to write items.

—Farmers in this section are getting on with their work quite well, considering the lateness of the season. People are repairing their buildings and fences.

—Politics seem to be the order of the day, though it seem to be disorder with the Republicans. I should think they might scare up another would be President or two.

—The new Reverend takes well with the people here, both old and young. Rev. George Forsyth has removed to Maine with his family. His wife's health is gaining rapidly.

—Health prevails here, the worst malady being, beaver on the brain.

—Our veteran Miner commences operation in a few days. Success follow his labors.

—We don't all of us approve of the way the young people serenade newly married couples, getting the most ancient instruments of music, and making the night hideous with their din.

—We have the West fairly represented by a gentleman from Boons Borough, just arrived.

—Some of the young ladies have contracted quite a fondness for riding with the doctors, or their horses.

—The Maple Sugar Season created some excitement while it lasted.

—Scott & Sweet are still enlarging their present large stock. The merchants have just returned from New York, having bought largely and a great variety.

—Fishing is quite a business now. The boys bringing large quantities from the neighboring lakes.

—If people that own logs near the saw mill and in the road, would roll them up, they would oblige every one that drives that way.

—We get the idea from the items in the Republican last week, that Mr. Guard, superintended the burning of his house, however, we are very sorry for him, as he lost most of his household goods. He has a new house in the process of erection. X. L. S.

Gibson, May 9th, 1873.

Letter from Minnesota.

Dear Democrat:—I avail myself of a brief sojourn to write you something from this western city, Minneapolis. Including St. Anthony, it contains over 20,000 inhabitants, and, geographically, is finely situated, stretching back, as it does, in a gradual and almost imperceptible ascent from the Mississippi river. Unlike St. Paul, noted for its wholesale business, this is a city of manufactories, whose motive power is chiefly supplied by the "Father of Waters." The comparatively inexhaustable pine forests in the northern part of the State, furnish material for these manufactories, which send out their wares all over the country, and are the sources of vast and increasing wealth. With such, in addition to other faculties of prosperity and progress, the city is rapidly developing and expanding, and will, it is thought in time, unite with St. Paul by mutual growth. In speaking thus much of the more practical and substantial, I must not omit some mention of the ornamental and beautiful. Conspicuous among the latter, are the falls of Minnehaha, so celebrated in Longfellow's Hiawatha. They have a perpendicular descent of 40 feet, and can be viewed from the rear as the rocks recede to allow a passage from side to side. So romatic, so delicate, so surpassingly lovely, they almost transcend the power of words to describe, and must be seen to be fully appreciated. I have looked upon Niagara as an embodyment of grandeur and power, but I see Minnehaha as a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." A few miles outside of the city, they are a popular resort, not only of the citizens thereof, but for travelers from all parts of the world. Some commodious and elegant structures are soon to be erected there in proportion to the importance of the place. Just below Minnehaha, at the confluence of the Mississippi and Minnesota rivers, is fort Snelling, which has a very commanding position, and is of considerable importance in a military way. In the immediate vicinity of the city are the falls of St. Anthony, which, however, have been deprived of much of their natural beauty, by the artificial means employed to prevent their wearing back so as to endanger the manufactories above them. But, notwithstanding all these attractions, Minneapolis has, like most western cities, not a few defects. Though possessing some fine public buildings, and many elegant private residences, the streets are unpaved, and its side-walks very imperfect. Moreover, little attention has yet been paid to ornamentive trees, and shrubbery, and flowers, which lend such a charm wherever they are found. In a word, Minneapolis might be likened to an overgrowing youth, with elements of greatness, but without the solidity and refinement of maturer years. For these and other reasons, he who views, with a critical eye, this city, as compared with more eastern cities, must note the contrast as unfavorable in no small degree.

The weather is very dry here, with little prospect of rain. Should the drought be protracted, the result must be disastrous indeed, not only to business generally, but with reference to the possible and probable ravages of fires. Even now, in some sections, I learn the flames are kindling. Heaven forbid the reenactment of such frightful scenes as I beheld last fall in Wisconsin, along the shore of Green Bay. I can never forget how then, for days and nights, the woods and fields, the hills and vales, were wrapped in one lurid blaze, and how, finally, doomed Peshtigo was reduced in a few short hours to a heap of smouldering ruins, and the grave closed over so many of its loved ones.

"Oh God it is a fearful thing,
To see the human soul take wing,
In any shape, in any mood,
I've seen it rushing forth in blood,
I've seen the sick and ghastly bed
Of sin delirious its dread,
But these were horrors this was woe
Unmatched by such, as sure nor slow."

So utterly swept from the face of existence was Peshtigo, that when I last passed over where it had stood, I could apply with truth the language of the poet:

"Not a fountain in this desert is springing,
In this wide waste nor dwelling nor tree,
Nor a bird in this solitude singing,
That speaks to my spirit of thee."

But since then, enterprise has done much in rebuilding the lost city, and kindred hands have gathered up the remains of the dear departed, and bestowed upon their final resting places, the tender care which humanity and affection esteem such a blessed privilege.

One word in conclusion with regard to the Cincinnati Convention. It would seem that about the first thing before the Convention, was the persistent claim of Susan B. Anthony, and another darling feminine from California, for official seats, which was denied, and so they did not sit at least in the convention, and I suppose the dear creatures, in consequence thereof, have suffered instead of having their suffrage. The next thing in order of a kindred nature, but more successful, was the nomination of Horace Greeley, the philosopher, for the presidency. I think it was Frederick the Great who said, "if one would send a government to ruin, turn it over into the hands of philosophers." Now I do not wish it to be understood, by this, that we are in any particular danger through the nomination of Mr. Greeley, for it is quite impossible for him to be elected. Grant will probably be the nominee of the Philadelphia Convention, and with these two candidates in the field, representing the radical and liberal Republicans, the Democrats can make march forward to an easy and assured victory. It is well, however, to be on the alert, and make every possible effort, for it is thought, by some, that both Grant and Greeley will be set aside for one who can reunite the party, in which case, the struggle will be more doubtful, but let us hope, with proper vigilance and determination, finally may result in the triumphant successs of Democracy, and a return to the principles of the Fathers. Sixteen Years of Success.

In 1856 the now famous Mustang Liniment was first made known to the public by an extensive system of advertising. From that time to the present, the demand for it has been steadily increasing until it has taken the lead of all embrocations, lotions, ointments, and other external remedies, imported or domestic, ever introduced into the American market. In the most celebrated racing and trotting stables, in the establishments of stage and city car companies, and the stables of private gentleman, it is the only recognized cure for such diseases of the horse as require outward treatment. Nor is it less valuable as a local application for some of the most distressing complaints to which man is subject. Rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, neuralgia, sore throat, tumors, wens, earache, toothache, yield to its pain subduing, counter-irritant properties, and burns, scalds and cuts are healed with incredible rapidity under its operation.

Special Notices.

How We Used to be Physicked.

Who does not remember the time when spring purgation was considered indispensable to summer health? No matter for wry faces, the inevitable salts and senna, rhubarb, or calomel and jalap, must be administered. These "spring medicines," the youngesters were told, were to keep them hale and hearty during the summer. We all know now that this was a fancy; that new vigor, not depletion, is what is required at the commencement of the summer solstice. As a preparation for the enervating effects of oppressive summer weath r, a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is highly expedient. This famous vegetable preparation has three prominent properties: It renovates, purifies, and regulates all the functions of the body. It is composed exclusively of pure vegetable productions, viz: the essential principle of Monongahela Rye, and the most efficacious tonic and alterative roots, barks, and gums known to medical botanists. Hence, it is an absolutely safe medicine, and no tincture of the Pharmacopœia can compare with it either in purity, or in the variety of its objects, and its comprehensive results. Happily for mankind, the theory that it was necessary to prostrate a patient in order to cure to him, is forever exploded, and the true philosophical doctrine, that vigor is the great antagonist of disease, has taken its place. Hostetter's Bitters is an invigorant, and hence it is the proper medicine for the people at this most trying season of the year

Be sure you obtain the genuine article, as there are innumerable vile imitations in the market. Look to the ornamental stamp, the engraved label, and the name blown into the glass, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is sold in bottles only.

Doctor, What is It?

Is a question frequently asked by a patient, who, though perhaps not sick enough to be confined to his room or bed, nevertheless feels himself physically unable to attend to his usual avocations.

There is a falling or general breaking down of the system, but no symtoms sufficiently marked to be classed as a disease, yet peculiarly trying to the sufferer. The feelings cannot be expressed—Doctors don't understand it; they may prescribe hopefully, yet blindly, and without result. Mishler's Herb Bitters is the best Remedy for these nameless disorders. TRY IT AND BE CONVINCED. Sold by all Druggists. Price one Dollar per bottle.
