An Awkward Mistake

GIVING A MINISTER A NICKEL POR PER FORMING THE MARRIAGE CERSMONT.

A young gentleman, whose name we dence must have been extensive, should since, and returned to his home with a lovely, happy bride. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Butler of this city.

After procuring the license and makeing all other necessary preparations, the roung man intended went to a bank on Main street and purchased a brand-new five-dollar gold-piece, which he slipped nervously, and no doubt thoughtlessly, on taking the piece from his pocket a short time afterwards, and finding that the supposed nickel was nothing less than the five dollar gold piece intended for the preacher! and, worse than all, the truth suidenly flashed through his mind that he had given Mr. Butler a nickel as pay gers have not dared to produce a letter for performing the marriage ceremony for by Shakespeare. He now understood the meaning of the half-amused, half-puzzled look which he had noticed for a moment in the minis-ter's eye, and went straightway to make stockings which her mother wore at her reparation. Accordingly, a day or two sgo, the reverend gentleman received a note telling the whole story, and accommon by his father upon his wed.
