

Select Miscellany.

A House Built in a Day. The newspapers of Lancaster, Pa., publish an account of the building of a brick dwelling house in that city in ten hours, the material and hauling had been prepared and collected on the site previous to the commencement. The house is twenty feet by thirty on the ground floor, two stories in height, and contains eight rooms. There were in all upward of 100 workmen employed.

Mr. J. T. Reading, photographer, was present with the apparatus, and took views every fifteen minutes of the building and the workmen. The motion picture, of course, produced some ridiculous pictures—men, white and colored, in almost every position, are to be seen represented. At 8 o'clock a. m., the structure was advanced to the height of one story, with two floors—ground and second—laid, partitions in, and lathed and plastered, doors and windows up and in place, the interior of the building was finished up, wash boards down and rubbish cleaned away. At this writing the tinners are leaving the building; roofing and spouting completed. Plasterers still at work in the second story. The building has been insured, and in the course of a few hours will be ready for a tenant.

A Remarkable Occurrence. A curious tragedy, resulting in the death of three young persons, recently took place in an Ohio village. A farmer named Wine was engaged in clearing out a well on his premises, which had long been in disuse and which was nearly dry. The workmen, being the farmer's engaged, had not touched it for several days, and a daughter of Mr. Wine, a young lady of eighteen years, thought she would put some butter at the bottom of the well to keep it cool, and she accordingly persuaded her young brother to let her down in the tub. She took the butter down safely and deposited it at the bottom of the well. Her brother was drawing her up, and when within a few feet of the top, the young lady became insensible and fell out of the tub to the bottom. The man raised the alarm and the father came. He let his son down, and before he could secure his sister's body to be drawn up he was lying senseless at the bottom. The father then raised the alarm and the neighbors came. A young man who was very intimate in the Wine family, and probably loved one of them, agreed to go down the well to bring up his two friends. He was let down at young Wine's side and like him stayed at the bottom. Only then it seemed to have occurred to anybody that it was foul air, and that going into the well was certain death. The deep hole had already swallowed up three estimable young people. A fourth went down with care and proper machinery for grappling, and finally all three were brought to the surface dead. The young lady was much admired in all the country round, and the two young men who lost their lives in trying to save a sister and a betrothed were of great promise.

"Cheer Him." At a fire in a large city, while the upper stories of a lofty dwelling were wrapped in smoke, and the lower stories all lit with flame, a merciful shriek and the startling cry of "cheer him" were some one's voice in the building in peril. A ladder was quickly run and diving through the flames and smoke until it touched the heated walls, a brave young fireman rushed up the rungs on his errand of mercy. Stilled by the smoke, he stopped, and seemed about to descend. The crowd was in agony as a life seemed lost, for every moment of hesitation meant an age. While this shivering fear seized every beholder, a voice from the crowd pealed out: "Cheer him! cheer him!" and a wild hurrah burst from the excited spectators. As the smoke reached the fireman he started upward through the curling smoke, and in a few moments was seen coming down the ladder with a child in his arms. That cheer did the work. How much we can do to help the brave ones who are struggling with temptation, or almost fainting in their effort to do good to others. Don't find fault with your brother in his trial but "cheer him." Give him a word that shall urge him on the way, and if you can't help him in any other way, give him a cheer.

Durability of Different Woods. Experiments have been lately made by driving sticks made of different woods, each two feet long, and one end one-half inch square, into the ground, only one-half inch projecting outward. It was found that in five years all those made of oak, elm, ash, fir, and poplar, were nearly every variety of pine, were totally rotten. Larch, hard pine and teak wood were decayed on the outside only, while acacia, with the exception of being slightly attacked on the exterior, was sound. Hard mahogany and cedar of various sorts were tolerably good sound, but only Virginia cedar was found as good as when put in the ground.

The Idaho Statesman thus eulogizes an Oregon minister: "Near the close of the day at a camp-meeting in Oregon, a short time ago, the local minister said: 'I hope all the congregation will be here by ten o'clock, for precisely at that hour we will meet to the creek, where I shall baptize four adults and six children.'

The Farmer.

How to Make Boys Hate Farming.

A gentleman wrote to a Farmers' Club requesting it if possible to procure him a boy who is honest, truthful, not lazy, and who will be likely to love farming. He wanted a boy to pick up stones, milk cows, turn grindstones, etc., and one that will not hate farming and run away every chance he gets. At the meeting at which this request was read one of the members answered in the following admirable way: "If a boy is ever justified in running away from his farm, he is justified in running away to go alone to perform a job that every faithful laborer hates. If you wish to keep a boy on the farm never set him alone when the birds are singing, the squirrels are chattering, and the violets are unfolding their charming petals, at picking stones in a large field. [Applause.] The truth is, those little arms and soft muscles are no more suitable for handling stones than the muscles of a young colt are to drawing a sub-soil plow. If you wish to make a boy love the farm better than any other employment, don't keep him turning a grindstone at noon when all the men are lying in the shade, and don't bear on with all your might, so hard as to stick him, and then ridicule him tamely, telling him he must eat more pudding and milk before he can turn a grindstone like a man. [Renewed applause.] Purchase that boy who is only fifteen pounds. You weigh 150, and the grindstone 150. Now then, suppose we let you turn a huge stone of 450 pounds, while a giant of 450 pounds bears on, which is a fair proportion between yourself and the boy. Before the giant has applied half his weight if he doesn't get the gig which every one dislikes to milk because the milk so hard. [Voice—'That's what he knows about milking!'] When the boy comes in at night so tired that he would rather lie down on the hard side of a maple plank than to eat his supper, don't tell him, 'Go to sleep and eat your supper so as to do that churning when all the men and older boys are allowed to read the newspapers, or to smoke un-molested. If you wish to induce a boy to think that Indian corn and potatoes are profitable crops, don't give him an old rusty hoe that no sensible man would use, and then tell him if he will cut in smart when hoeing he will help him keep his row up even with the rest. [Renewed cheers.] If you don't want to make a boy hate the country, when a task is assigned to him, don't pile on so much as to compel him to summon all his energies for three-fourths of the day to complete it, and then as soon as the job is done, tell him he will have to go to the mill or the cook house to get his dinner for the next day. If you can't want to make a boy hate all the operations of a farm, don't tell him while all the men are taking their "nooning" in harvest time, to water the cows and horses, and to hurry up so as to get his dinner for the next day. If you want to make an energetic and successful farmer of a boy, don't encourage him to rise before daylight so as to rake the wheat stubbles while the dew is on, telling him he shall have half the gleanings, and then sell his part of the grain with the crop and tell him if he inquires about his share of money, that the little sum received will not pay for half his board next winter. [Laughter and a voice saying 'I guess you will not pay for his board next winter.'] Don't badger a good boy to the verge of desperation with the mischievous and obnoxious "go boys" system of management. If you want to make him like farming operations, don't fret every autumn to desire out of the young aspirant with the repulsive and incessant ding dong of Jim do this, and Jim do that. When all Jim gets is an old straw hat. There is no precept and no reasoning that will induce boys to stick to the farm like the cheering words, "Come, come, boys, always accompanied by an irreproachable example in leading the way.— arrange as it may seem to some, boys are human.

Proper Feeding. The proper feeding of horses has much to do with their condition, and likewise with their remaining sound. Food should be proportioned to work, and it should also be of the best quality. Hay that has been much heated in the stack, is above all things to be avoided, as from its powerful heating properties, it debilitates and creates thirst; and more burnt or heated crops are equally productive of mischief. Hay which is produced on dry unplowed ground is the best. Indeed, we are far from thinking that rich meadow hay, finely scented as it is, and apparently so full of nourishment, is fitted for any description of horse that is required to go fast, and we are quite certain that thousands of horses are destroyed annually by the effects of hay and water. The latter cannot be too soft, and when not so it should be given with a small portion of bran in it.—Prairie Farmer.

The fifteenth session of the American Pomological Society will be held in the hall of the Boston Horticultural Society, on Wednesday, September 16, and will continue for three days. Col. Marshall P. Wilder is President. The Secretary, by various notes in his last report, has given an account of all the leading agricultural and horticultural journals, and they unite in a demand for a new officer.

DR. ANDERSON, of Edinburg, Scotland, claims to have proved by actual experiment that the last pint of milk drawn from a cow contains sixteen times as much cream as the one first drawn, and from this he argues that the cream separates from the milk while yet in the udder of the cow, and that the cream rising to the surface, is last drawn.
