The tree was about thirty inches in diameter and twenty feet clear to the first limb. The lightning struck the tree about the lower limb, tearing it completely out of the roots, and ploughing up the ground for a distance of sixteen feet around the tree. The top of the tree was intact, and contains about two cords of wood, and fell directly into the hole where the stump stood. The splinters and debris were scattered around, covering the ground for a distance of fifty yards. The most singular part is that the top should fall directly where the stump had been, in such a position as if planted there. T. A. Thompson, esq. Lecturer of the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, visited this Thursday last, and delivered an adtress in the Court House. Owing to the fact that the meeting was poorly advertised, but few outside the members of the Order in this immediate vicinity were present. We deem it extremely unfortunate that our citizens could not have been present, as we are certain that they would have received quite a different impres sion in regard to the objects and designs of the Order, from that which now exists in the mind of the public. Mr. Thompson said it was not the design of the Grango to make war on rail. road corporations or any other class in community. It was designed to bring producer and consumer into closer union and do away with the enormous profits of a class of middle men, who neither produce anything nor furnish capital to conduct legitimate business.
