Condiment in Poultry Diet. Cayenne pepper, mustard, or ginger can with great benefit, be added to the food of fowls to increase their vigor and to stum-ulate egg production. This apparently artificial diet will be seen to be natural, if we remember that wild birds of the gallinaceous species get access to very many highly-spiced berries and buds; articles that give the "game flavor" to their flesh. The ordinary food of the domes-tic fowl is not, indeed, entrely with ut some such addition, since there is more or less of an aromantic, principle in wheat, Indian corn, and all other grains. Nev-ertheless, it is not sufficient in quality to supply the place of the stronger epices a taste for which is a part of a fowl's infer-tied constitution. A moderate quantity of cayenne, etc., added to the groud grain, is always productive of the alth and thrift in poultry.—The poultry World. Geraniums, if watered with light and OUR namely.
