and she was so enthusiastic over the idea that I consented to turn that waste of oyster cans; hoop-skirts, ash barrells and old axe handles into a smiling garden.

I dreamed of planting beans, climbing cucumber vines and selling lettuce by the car-load, and next morning I gave a man five dollars to clear out and shape up the back yard. Then I bought a spade, hoe and rake and proceeded to lay the ground off into beds and to make romantic walks between them wherein the children and their mother might wander at eventide. I was a week doing this. Some of the beds were square, three-cornered and some on the half-circle, and the broad avenues and alley runthree-cornered and some on the half-circle, and the broad avenues and alley runing between excited the jealousy of all the professional gardens in town. They couldn't lick me and so they called me names. One said I was an old fool, another said I was an idot, another thought liked some made and the rest of the pulling fodder does not seriously liked some made and the rest of the pulling fodder does not seriously liked some made and the rest of the pulling fodder does not seriously liked some made and the rest of the pulling fodder does not seriously liked some made and the produce more made.

other said I was an idiot, another thought I had gone mad, and the rest of them called pirate and so forth. I should have been discouraged but for my wife.

I planted five dollars worth of stuff—I slung in peas by the pint, exhausted the bean market, and scattered lettuce until the ground groaned, and then I fell back and waited for nature. While we were on an excussion down the river, Smith's hens came over and sat down on back and waited for nature. While we were on an excusion down the river, Smith's hens came over and sat down on my delicate beds, dug holes in them, kicked the dirt around, and knocked the corners off the middle bed. I went for Smith, barked his nose, and was fined $25, and then I spint a whole day repairing the beds.

The garden was doing finely, and I was contracting to supply a hotel with early vegetables, when Purdy's pig got out and made me a visit. When I got home and went out to wander in my garden, I threw down my hat, jumped on it, and swore that I'd roast Purdy at the stake. I went over and dared him to knock a chip off my shoulder, and was arrested for threats and fined fifteen dollars. It took a week to fix up my garden. I bought three dollars worth of guano, and sat up all' night watching with the early plants, and finally they got over it and began to smile again. The morning that I was able to point out to my family the Lop of an early onion, and three or four green things where I had sowed lettuce, was a proud morning for me. There were tears in my wife's eyes and the children leaned morning for me. There were tears in my wife's eyes and the children leaned against the woodshed and sobbed in exul-

A week passed, the plants were just throwing dirt over the fence, when the throwing dirt over the fence, when the chimney on the next house took fire, and the firemen came in on my garden.—
When I got home and went out to wander, I saw the smiling verdure of the morning turned into a lake, with a dead hen in the center for an island. The dear children were sailing corn starch boxes across the lake towards a dead cat in the corner, and as they saw me they cried out: "Oh, Father! ain't you glad We can now have a milldam. and be as big as Mr. Tripp's folks!"

Preserving Green Fodder.

A method of preserving green fodder such as turnip-tops, or other succulent vegetables has been in use for many years in Europe, by which this green fodder is kept in good condition for six or twelve months. A trench two to four feet deep is dug in a dry spot in the filled, and the tops of the roots, carefully gathered when tops of the roots, carefully gathered when they can now have a milldam. and be as big as Mr. Tripp's folks!"

was nearly dead with consumption, and a Dr. Hopkins, at last, in despair, concluded to try the effect of a transfusion of blood of which he had heard so much lately. As no human being was willing to shed his blood for Simpson, the doctor bled Simpson's goat, and opening a vein pal requisites are to pick away the leaves in Simpson's arm he ejected about two when dry, to compress them as closely as quarts of the blood into the patients system. Simpson immediately began to revive; but, singular to relate, no sooner that his strength returned than he jumped out of bed and twitching his head about the fashion of a goat he made a out of bed and twitching his head about after the fashion of a goat, he made a savage attempt to butt the doctor. That medical gentleman, after having Simpson's head plunged against his stomach three or four times, took refuge in the closet; whereupon Simpson banged his head against the panel of the door a couple of times, and would probably have broken it to splinters had not his mother-in-law entered at that moment and diverted his attention. One well directed ple of times, and would probably have broken it to epilinters had not his moths or herein-law entered at that moment and diverted his attention. One well directed blow from Simpson floored her, and then while she screamed for help, Simpson frolicked around over the floor, making assiduous efforts to nibble the greea flowers in the ingrain carpet. When they called the hired man in and tied him down on the bed, an effort was made to interview him, but the only answer he could give to such questions as how he felt and when he wanted his medicine was a 'ba-a', 'precisely like that of the goat; and then he would strain himself in an effort to but ta hole in the head board. The condition of the patient was so alarming, and Mrs. Simpson was so she well as ever, excepting that he shocks his old republican friends by displaying an irresistible tendency to rote the democratic ticket, and makes his mother-in-law mad by speaking with a strong bregue. But he has given up butting, and has never induged in it since but once, and that was on Sunday, when one of the remaining corpuscles of goat's blood getting into his brain just as he was going it to church, he butted the come of the remaining corpuscles of goat's blood getting into his brain just as he was going it to church, he butted the come of the remaining corpuscles of goat's blood getting into his brain just as he was going it to church, he butted the come of the remaining corpuscles of goat's blood getting into his brain just as he was going it to church, he butted the come of the remaining corpuscles of goat's blood getting into his brain just as he was going it to church, he butted the come of the remaining corpuscles of goat's blood getting into his brain just as he was going it to church, he butted the come of the remaining corpuscles of goat's blood getting into his promoter the find of the part of the promoter of goat's blood ge

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD. Agricultural Experience.

Dr. E. M. Pendleton, Professor of Agriculture in the Georgia Agricultural College, in a recent claborate report concerning the results of experimental farming, epitomizes some valuable information as ioliows:

That the application of soluble ma-nures in a liquid form is better and more efficient than when applied in the dry

will greatly improved their fertilizing

That two hundred pounds of a good ammoniated superphosphate is about the quanity to be used on an acre of cotton.

We can now have a milldam. and be as big as Mr. Tripp's folks!"

My wife is very quiet and meek now-adays. She never says anything about early vegetables or smiling gardens, and if I mention the subject myself, she replies in the absent way: "Richard, isn't it strange that I don't get a letter from mother?"

Transfusion of Blood.

Max Adeler writes to the Danbury News as follows:

"A recent medical experiment has excited a considerable amount of interest in our village. My neighbor Simpson was nearly dead with consumption, and mother the fodder and aids in its preservation. It would be worth while when our root crops are being gathered to preserve the tops in this

Drugs and Medicines.

It. J. Malker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal promountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of Vincian Birtens?" Our caswer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose, qual to Dn. J.
