Pay your taxes. No person can vote on a tax receipt dated after the third day of October.

It is no war of races in Louisiana. It is white and black people against white and black plunderers.

If only these republican writers who have been equal service with Gen. McCan, less felt called upon to criticize his military record or disparage a soldier whose blood has been spilled on more than one battle field, there would be an end of such worthless argument. The cowardly scribbles who staid away from the war would be mute, and his fellow soldiers would have only praise for his unblemished record.

There is not a newspaper, democrat or republican, in the whole land, which does not admit that Kellogg was not elected governor of Louisiana. Yet Grant employs the army of the United States and uses the taxes of the people to force Kellogg into the gubernatorial seat, and to keep him there in spite of the will of the people of Louisiana expressed at the ballot box and sealed with the blood of successful revolution.

The supreme court of Wisconsin recently decided that a parent has the right of naming and limiting the studies his children should pursue in the public schools, subject only to the necessity of confining his selections to the branches taught. If this is sound law it is a very important modification of the compulsory education scheme which has now lifted itself into partisan platforms as a means of enforcing attendance at mixed schools.

The radical journals sing quite small of late in regard to the election in Maine. The majority will not much exceed two thousand, a loss of about twenty thousand on the majority for Grant two years ago, and of about three thousand on that of last year for the radical candidate for governor. The democrats have made considerable gains in the lower house of the legislature, enough with the help of anti-federal republicans to give the executive president serious trouble in his candidacy for re-election to the United States senate.

Democrat everywhere should profit by the timely hints suggested by the Altoona Sun and at once go to work. It says:

It will now be for the Democratic party to effect a thorough organization in every county of the state—not only in every county but also in every city, borough, ward and township. Without this we have no good ground to expect success, but with it and an honest election we confidently anticipate an old-fashioned Democratic victory. Our political opponents are all under a most rigid discipline and can bring every voter belonging to their party to the polls. We must "go and do likewise" if we would enjoy a triumph.

There are a few republican newspapers of the more virulent sort which have raised the cry of "cooperhead" and "rebel" as the fitting reply of a people made desperate by a most intolerable despotism. But it is no longer a full chorus. Those journals whose opinions are not colored by official relations with the government at Washington, or which do not like parrots, repeat at inopportune times their little story of expetives, have hardly fallen behind their democrat contemporaries in indignant comment upon the humiliating position of the President and congress.

"We lately published," says the Chicago Tribune, "the information that a German publishing house had discontinued the publication of Beecher's 'Life of Christ' on account of the revelations made concerning his character lately. The house in question has published a card, saying: 'We have been, unfortunately, compelled to take this step. The good name of our house makes it a necessity that we should give up the idea of continuing to bring out the book.' A Leipzig organ, commenting on the above, says: 'And this is the highly esteemed, highly honored Mr. Beecher as he appears before the world, self-accused and self-condemned. No German, with any thought of morality, no honorable German woman can afford under the circumstances, to read the 'Life of Christ,' coming from so impure a source.' Distinct, like time, has a wonderful effect in promoting clear, impartial judgment."

The democrats of New York, assembled in convention at Syracuse, and put a strong candidate upon a strong platform. Mr. Samuel J. Tilden is a citizen after the antique Jeffersonian pattern, every inch a statesman, and a fearless, incorruptible, life-long democrat. Unlike the distinguished gentleman who is likely to be his competitor, Gov. Dix, Mr. Tilden has never been an office-seeker; but he has given to his party the weight of his active intellect for years. The intrepid, unbroken front which the party has sustained in all the disastrous years since the presidency of Buchanan is greatly due to his exertions. The city of New York and the country at large owe to him more than any other man or men the exposure, trial and conviction of Tweed. This was the commencement of the onslaught on official corruption, which was weakly followed up by the republican party. There is no other instance where such a wealthy and notorious plunderer has been properly punished. The nomination of Mr. Tilden confirms anew the position of the democratic party as the opponent of official corruption and the conservator of political honesty in this country.

The President's Victory.

The New York Tribune says: "General Grant has vanquished the people of Louisiana again. He has telegraphed to his generals and his admirals; he has set the army and navy in motion; and the lawful government of Louisiana surrenders. If there was any doubt before as to the character of the usurpation which rules the unhappy state by favor of the President—any question whether the people really acquiesced in it—there can be none now. The outrage stands out henceforth in all its naked deformity, an unpardonable crime against popular suffrage and the sovereignty of a state."

A government which the people loathe and despise was forced upon Louisiana by the soldiers of the President. Left to themselves for a moment, the people threw it off and installed the officers whom they had regularly chosen at the polls. The deposed intruders made no fight; they were as helpless and cowardly as children in the presence of the indignant people; but covering behind the shutters of the custom house they telegraphed to the President; "The people have put us out; this is your job; come you and put us back again."

Two years ago Grant yielded to the bad advice of his disreputable associates, and installed Kellogg at New Orleans as fraud and force, because he wanted the electoral vote of the state, which a majority of the voters had given to the other side. That wicked deed has brought forth a full crop of crimes. We have seen him dispersing a legislature at the point of the bayonet, expelling a legitimate government with threats of martial law, and reversing the course of justice by the scandalous support of a perjured court.

His own friends have exclaimed at the iniquity of these proceedings, and warned him to desist. The hottest partisans of his administration have denounced the wicked usurpations of Kellogg and Durell with an indignation that does them credit. Seventeen republican senators voted in February, 1873, to declare the pretended election null and void, and to turn him out of office. The president himself finally admitted in a special message to congress that so many forgeries and frauds had been discovered that he was not sure of Kellogg's title. An official investigation proved the falsity of the whole transaction beyond any possibility of denial. But the President would not halt. He must carry out his original crime to its natural consequences and the inexorable logic of events has led him to his crowning shame. For the first time in the history of the United States the soldiers of the Union are employed to drive out a legitimate governor and place a miserable pretender in the state house to shoot down in the streets the people who refuse to obey him. For this disgraceful and disheartening spectacle the congress which refused to act on the Louisiana report, and the republican party which tacitly approved the wrong, are both to blame; but it is upon the President that the chief responsibility must rest—the President who began the long course of oppression—the President who could have stopped it at any moment if he had chosen and could stop it now—the President who is probably the only man in America not ashamed of the whole business, and who comes forward in the midst of it asking for a third term.

"I'm not much for stumping spatin," declared a candidate at Dubuque, Iowa, "but for honesty and capability and integrity I bate the devil."

In 1838, under the Presidency of Martin Van Buren, when application was made by Governor Ritner for United States troops in order to resist in subverting the legal government of Pennsylvania, the federal authorities could find no warrant for interfering in a "political quarrel" and refused the application. But when Governor Ritner complained that a deputy marshal of the United States and a man named Pennington, suspected of being an official of the Philadelphia custom house, had taken an active part in the disturbances at Harrisburg, the complaint was made the subject of official inquiry with a view to the punishment of the offenders. Since that day times have bravely changed. Custom house officers are selected with a special view to their capacity for manipulating state politics, and in Louisiana Marshal Packard is at once the person who has charge of the movements of the federal troops and the management of the republican campaign as the chairman of the republican state committee.

Another Terrible Disaster.

FALL RIVER, MASS. September 19.—A fire broke out in Granite mill No. 1, in this city about seven o'clock this morning, just after the operators commenced work.

The room was instantly in flames, cutting off all ways of escape. An alarm was sounded, but no help could arrive from the mill, women and children there themselves from the windows. Many were instantly killed, some mortally wounded, and the remainder more or less injured. The larger number of those who remained in the room were burned to death. A quantity of charred remains have been found. It is estimated that from fifty to seventy-five males have lost their lives, while as many more are badly injured. The mills have stopped work for the present, owing to the calamity, and business is almost suspended in the town. The scenes at the mills and vicinity are heartrending. Mothers are seen looking for their children, and many are almost frantic with grief. All the physicians in the town were immediately summoned and rendered all possible relief to the sufferers. Ellen Hunter is missing. One man escaped from the upper room by means of a rope. It is reported that he left thirty persons behind him, who it is supposed, all perished in the flames. Mary, Bridget and Margaret Murphy are dangerously wounded. Full lists of names are not yet obtained.

LATER DISPATCHES.

FALL RIVER, MASS. September 19.—Reports of the police-mill authorities reduce the number of killed by the mill disaster yesterday to 20; missing, 2; wounded, 36; fatally, 2; recovery doubtful, 10; slightly, 21.

FALL RIVER, MASS. September 20.—Three of the wounded have since died, making the total deaths 23.
