Death Warrant. Governor Hartrast has signed the death warrants of Daniel O'Mara and Patrick Irving, who were convicted of murdering O'Mara's mother and sister at Montrose Depot. They are to be executed at Montrose on Thursday, Nov. 12th.

Lectures. Rev. J. S. Osterander of Newark, N. J., will give his lecture, entitled, "Manners and Scenes in Bible Lands," at the Presbyterian church on Wednesday evening, Oct. 28th, under the auspices of the Wyalusing District Sunday School Institute.

Political Catching. E. B. Hawley—Dear Sir: We are constituted a committee to ask you to pledge your support to the Register of the Local Option law, if elected. Mr. Watson has so pledged himself, we are informed.

That all inquiring friends may be answered at the same time, I make answer to the above through the columns of the DEMOCRAT:—

First—Mr. Watson's action does not govern me.

Second—I deny the authority of any self-constituted committee or person to catechize me, since the adjournment of the Democratic convention, and more especially on any matter of conscience or religion. I hold myself responsible on all such matters, only to my Creator, and I consider it just as legitimate to attempt to pledge me for or against the Presbyterian or Methodist church, as upon any other moral question.

Third—I challenge any man, woman, child, society or party to truthfully say that I ever promised or pledged myself either for or against Local Option, and I have never yet seen the power that will compel me to take any such action. I never asked for a nomination to any office at the hands of any convention, and I never have asked, nor shall I ask, any man to vote for me. If elected, or not, I propose to retain the same manhood and independence, and be as free to act by the same dictates of conscience as a candidate for office, that I ever have maintained as a private citizen.

That it may be clearly understood, I repeat that on all moral questions, I hold myself answerable to my conscience and my Creator.—On all civil matters I shall be responsible to the people as their servant, if elected to act in any official capacity.

Yours Respectfully, E. B. HAWLEY.

Harford Fair. The Harford Agricultural Society was very unlucky in the inclemency of the weather on the first appointment of the Fair, and also very fortunate in that respect at the time adjourned to, but the popularity of those meetings is such in this section that it does not interfere with the attendance at their Fair as it does with some others. Although there was not as many an attendance as usual, yet there was a large number of people on the grounds on Tuesday the 10th instant. The show, as usual, was first class, and everything, so far as we were able to judge passed off in a satisfactory manner to all concerned and beyond what might have been expected under the circumstances.

The Harford Agricultural Society has the reputation of being among the first in this section of the country, and it has always been able to fully sustain it thus far.

Gerritt Smith. The Republican says: "Probably that veteran philanthropist, Gerritt Smith, under the auspices of the Democratic Party as well as anybody, and he says, 'My first duty is to oppose it.'"

Gerritt Smith hates the Bible the same as he hates the Democratic Party. He has spent thirty years in preaching against the Bible, and is trying to substitute the religion of reason.—If he is good authority for the people to hate Democracy he is good authority for them to hate the Bible. He says, "The preacher of a eternal hell would himself go crazy if he believed his own preaching." Thus branding orthodox ministers as hypocrites. It would be equally consistent for the people to refuse to hear the Ministers of the Gospel preach, because Gerritt Smith believes them hypocrites— as to refuse to vote the Democratic ticket, because Gerritt Smith hates Democrats. The Bible and Democratic Party are the especial objects of the hatred of this veteran.

We are now in the midst of the grand season of Autumn, with its burning tints and bracing and charming atmosphere. A writer on this subject remarks that Autumn in this climate is so essentially different from the Autumn of Europe that one who knows only the latter would scarcely recognize the season as it occurs in this country. There is a brief and poetic nature, sad; here it is the most glorious season of the year, tingling the foliage of the woods with the russet of the fall, the fiery and short-lived fever of Summer and the fresh babyhood of the spring. For Spring with us is not what it is in the old world, it comes and goes with its sweet breath and velvet touch, almost in a moment, and it has but one beautiful, but Autumn is double lived, splendid in her beauty, in which, with melancholy reminiscence, she lives again in the golden Indian Summer, a time unknown in Europe, and the most beautiful of all.

MESSRS EDITORS DEMOCRAT—I find that Willoughby W. Watson, Republican nominee for Senate, keeps his pen running in the way of offering writing, and some have heard from him that this town who will not do what he desires of them. They say they do not know what reason they ever gave him to suppose that he could make a fool of one "Talent" which he sends about the county seeking to gain other "Talent." Will you please tell him for me that I think he had better try to get to know what the master comes he can render to him his own, for he never will gain anything by him.

Now, Mr. Editor, I think if Hawley will write to Mr. Watson and pledge himself not to go in for the repeal of the Seizer Divorce bill, which Benj. Fitch, Watson & Co. got through the Legislature, that it might relieve him some. We know, down here in Auburn, that he made a good thing, peculiarly in doing his dirty work at home, in this case, and undoubtedly he will go to Harrisburg and after a little while be ready for more. It is rather intimated about here, however, that he will get a clean divorce, himself, from the Senate of this State, without "alimony," about November 3d. Auburn, Oct. 17, 1874.

It is now time for those who cultivate flowers to make their preparations for protecting them during the winter. The heliotropes blacked with the first frost, and many of the delicate flowers should be potted, if they are to be kept in the house during the cold weather.—The roses and other hardy plants need no covering for some time yet. If they are to remain out of doors, but if it is desired to have them bloom next winter it will be well to cut them back and pot them.

Nothing is pleasanter during the dreary months of winter than the sight of a few plants and flowers. If a conservatory be impossible any window with a southern exposure will give an opportunity for the cultivation of a selection of a few easy growing plants, and as many of the windows testify little care and plenty of warmth will give an abundance of fragrant blossoms, recalling the warm, pleasant days and the thousand pleasures of summer.

In London there is a Society for the purpose of window gardening among the poorer classes. Under its auspices a show was recently held, at which prizes were awarded for the best boxes of plants—Books on horticulture were also given to those suggesting the best plants for floral decorations with growing plants. The poorer districts are said to have been greatly benefited and improved by the encouragement of a taste for flowers.

A Revival is going on at the Tower Meeting-House. But the number of converts, I am not learned.

Win. A. Tourje died last Saturday morning, Oct. 10th, and was buried last Sunday. His death was very sudden, although he had been in poor health for some time. He was the last survivor of the "old stock" of the Tourje family.

I will close by requesting all those who go in for the cause of the poor laboring class, of the community—that their taxes may be lessened instead of being increased—that the old Jeffersonian doctrine may again become triumphant, to go and vote the Democratic ticket on Nov. 3d.

Excelsior.

The false representation of E. L. Weeks in order to screen himself, and his imported Builders, from all blame, for the fall of the New M. E. Church Spire in this village, renders a word or two of explanation necessary, for his public assertion that the Spire was built exactly after my plans, is simply false. And those good men including the pet Domestic Workmen of the imported master builder, before reporting the false assertion, had better study the rudiments of constructive carpentry, that they may at least understand what they are saying. I am not the architect of that building. The plans, elevations and most of the detail, changes and specifications were made by W. W. Monkman of Binghamton, without any regard to my dictations on my part whatever. After the main body of the church frame was up, at the request of A. W. Cooley, who was then at work upon the building, I did make detail drawings of the Tower and Spire, as he said the Architect had not furnished them. (The drawing may be seen at any time by all who will take the trouble to call on Mr. Cooley at his carpenter shop) in the village of Binghamton. The entire height of the tower was on the foundation walls, and the height of the Spire was on the tower. The entire height of the Architects elevation was 167 feet. The height of the structure that tumbled over, as I have been informed by one who went to the top of it, was 171 feet. This is 31 feet higher than my plans, which Mr. Weeks says it was built after. Weeks has been heard to say it was 184 feet high. (Some difference is it not?) The joint of the octagon spire to the square tower was entirely and made in 1867, and the plans prepared by myself, (and here was the great fault). The timbers according to my plans at the base of the spire were placed in position last fall, prior to the contract with the present builder but were not bolted with iron as the plans showed they were to be, (another little difference and of some importance too). Every spiral post was to be bolted down and strengthened at the point with hard wood—Which was not done in the one that fell as I have been informed that it was 4 bolts used, and those small ones (another little difference). Now those only it was to furnish the bolts, and see that they were properly and securely fastened in their places, I have for the building committee to say.

It needed not the mighty words of Heaven, which I am told Weeks said could not blow it over, but a not uncommon west wind pushed it down. Had it toppled over at a time when the church was filled with human beings, as it often is, the result would have been something to say about. I have been informed by Mr. Cooley, the Architect, Monkman, charged him to be sure to make the spire 20 or 30 feet lower than the elevation indicated.
