Two Kinds of Farmers.

Forrest Moreland, of Heuvelton, N. Y. in writing to the Country Gentleman says:

The farm of the careless, slothful, ignorant farmer, is separates from that o daries more plain than line fences. Mr. A., while driving a poor team attached to an inferior drug by a malicious harness which had already taken its revenge on the poor animals by galling in numerous places, sucdenly, strikes a stone and breaker the drag long since deserving a pension for previous injurice. To quote Mr. A's own words, "This is jest my luck." In fact, as fast as his tools grow old from too much exposure to the weather and lack of suitable care, it is just his luck to have them breaking when he is in a hurry This by no means uncommon accident furnishes a respite for the horses, and a jurney to Mr. A's favorite haunt—the black-smith's shop.

Passing farmer B.'s well fenced and highly cultivated farm, he observed sev eral young men also engaged in preparing the soil and sowing grain, but in quite a different style. One is driving a well-kept team hitched to the cultivator on kept team hitched to the cultivator on which he was riding. It is an improved implement, which has "requently caused Mr. A. to wonder "why on airth Mr. B. wants to pay so much for a cultivator when a drag is jest as good." The cultivator leaves the ground in good condition for the improved grain drill seen in another portion of the field; still another investion as Mr. A maintains for mak. invention, as Mr. A. maintains for making lazy farmers. He "allers believed in larnin boys to sow by band, as their fathers and their grandfathers did before them." Mr. A.'s boys left him years ago to learn trades. It was easier for the devont Hindoo to pass the lines of caste than for Mr. A.'s boys to overcome their father's overweening confidence in the agricultural lore of the past, or pass the boundary lines that separated their condition from that of the more fortunate sons of Mr. B., -bom a lry lines that hedged them in, warping their very souls, until they were driven in disgust from a vocation they should have learned to love.

The substantial fence that separates Mr. A.'s farm from that of Mr. B's is sec oud only to the strong line of contrast that separates them to their latthest exten On one had, a farm well laid out and convenient in all its arrangments; a farm well tilled and susceptible of the highest cultivation. On the other hand, a farm that was never permanently laid out, but is laid out anew, year after year, to suit the converience and varying taste of the owner. "Variety is the spice of life," and Mr. A has only to look at his farm, and the view (there is so much variety in it) should make him feel quite spicy. The variety in the shapes of his different ficias is simply astonishing. His fields are regular and irregular; angular, triangular and quadangular. No two of his fields are white. In one the stones have broken his plow and his drag; have worried his team and his temper year after year.

"But," says Mr. A., "it never did pay to give that ere field any extra work; it don't give half a crop anyway." The result is that those stones get a permanent letting alone. In another there is an ob-vious want of underdraining, and Mr. A. vious want of underdraining, and Mr. A. has 'hearn somethin'somewhere' bout underdrains, but never raily did believe in this 'ere fancy farmin'.' Mr. A's farm is devoid of all that pleases the eye or the pocket of the intelligent farmer, for his crops are so poor that they do not pay for even his poor cultivation. "Seasons are gettin' awful onsartin," says Mr. A., if feet sensons do not seem to be a good in fact, seasons do not seem to be as good for Mr. A.'s farm since he began selling his hay and grain instead of feeding in on the farm. Mr. A. is a practical (?) farmer. Men of his stamp are found in every farming community. They have been unfortunately placed on farms, and they stay there. The world moves; they

Destroying the Bark Louse.

There are several species of bark lice, all more or less injurious to plants upon which they live, and some are rather difficult to destroy. The particular species infesting the apple tree (Aspidio-tus conchiformis) can usually be destroy-ed by thoroughly washing the bark with strong soapsuds or with a potash ly. — The "scale bug" which infests the orange The "scale-bug" which interest the orange troe (cocous ciri) is very similar in its habits to the apple bark louse but is more difficult to kill. A vigorous use of soapsuds seems so be only a transient remedy. The application of alcohol is also transient in its result. Lately this insections made its americance in the orange has made its appearance in the orange orchards in Los Angeles Valley, California ortenates in Los Angeles valley, Canforna, injuring the quality of the fruit to some extent, and threatening to destroy the trees. Some of the leading orange culturists in that locality have been experi menting on the effects of the various remedies that have been from time to time suggested, and, according to a card which they have published in the Los Angeles Herald, have succeeded in finding a sure remedy. The principal ingredicat in the remedy used to carbonic acid gas, and it is applied by the use of an ordinary portable fire extinguisher. The strength of an ordinary charge is simply reduced and it is applied directly to the time suggested, and, according to a card reduced, and it is applied directly to the trees. The inventor lays no claim to any patent and Californians say that any of the common patent extinguishers can be successfully used.

A photograph has been forwarded to England, which has aroused the astorishment of their distinguished men .-It is taken of a branch of pears grown from a tree on the branch of Mr. Kerchegal near Sucramento, Cal. The branch was 4 feet 6 inches long; carried 265 pears, mos! of which were about 5 inches in length, the whole weighing

Two cubic feet of good dry corn on the cold will make one bushel of shelled corn. If you want to get the number of bushels of shelled corn in the crib of corn apon the ear, multiply the length, breadth, and thickness of the inside o the crib together and divide by two, and you have the number of bushels of shelled corn it contains.

To measure apples in the crib.—Multiply the length, breadth, and thickness of the bin, and this product by eight and point off the figure in the product for technils.

Drugs and Medicines

BR. d. alker's (alifornia imegar Bittets are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of Vinegas Bitters." Our answer is, that they remove the caure of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of Vinegas Bitters in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Fonic, relieving Congestion or Infammation of the Liver and Viscenil Organs, in Bilious Diseases. Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Bracos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Sammer and Antumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no eathertic for the purpose equal to Dra J. Walken's Virseou Brittens, as they will specially remove the dark-colored vised matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the beauthy functions of the diverging Bilious, Remittent, and Intermitsecretions of the liver, and generally restor-ing the healthy functions of the digestive
