In a series of autobiographical letters he The best Flour at reduced prices at gave a statement as to the moderation of his desires, well worthy of being brought under general notice : March 17, 1875.

"My views and wishes with regard to property were in every period of my life contained within a very moderate compass. I was early persuaded that, though 'a competence is vital to content, I ought not to annex to that term the idea of much property. I determined that when I should acquire enough to enable me to ch maintain and provide for my family in a resnectable and moderate manner, and this accord ing to real and rational, not imaginary and fill our streams with fish. If it should turn out inntastic wants and a little to spare for the necessities of others. I would decline the pursuit of property and devote a great part of my time. in some way or other, to the benefit of my felto serve them. I perceived that the desire of great possessions generally expands with the gradual acquisition and full attainment of them; and I imagized that charity and a generous ap-plication do not sufficiently correspond with the increase of property. I thought, too, that procuring great wealth has a tendency to prolow creatures, within the sphere of my abilities procuring great wealth has a tendency to produce an elated independence of mind, little con-nected with that humility which is the ground of all our virtues; that a busy and aaxlous pursuit of it often excludes views and reflec-tions of infinite importance, and leaves but lit-tle time to acquire that treasure which would make us rich indeed. • • • • I was pursuaded that a truly sincere mind could be at no loss to discern the just limits hetween a safe and competent portion and a dangerous profusion of the good things of life. On the locomotives now in use are connect ing rods weighing from 500 to 800 pounds, to alance which counterweights are attached to the rims of the driving wheels.
