the domestic interpretations of the law, are the measure of its duty as a neutral; and I feel bound to declare my opinion, before you and before the world, that that justification cannot be sustained before the tribunal of nations. At the same time I do not advise to any present attempt at redress by acts of legislation. For the future, friendship between the two countries must rest on the basis of mutual justice.

From the moment of the establishment of our free Constitution, the civilized world has been convulsed by revolutions in the interests of democracy or of monarchy; but through all of those revolutions the United States have wisely and firmly refused to become propagandists of republicanism. It is the only government suited to our condition; but we have never sought to impose it on others; and we have consistently followed the advice of Washington to recommend it only by the careful preservation and prudent use of the blessing. During all the intervening period the policy of European Powers and of the United States has, on the whole, been harmonious. Twice, indeed, rumors of the invasion of some parts of America, in the interest of monarchy, have prevailed; twice my predecessors have had occasion to announce the views of this nation in respect to such interference. On both occasions the remonstrance of the United States was respected, from a deep conviction, on the part of European governments, that the system of non-interference and mutual abstinence from propagandism was the true rule for the two hemispheres. Since those times we have advanced in wealth and power; but we retain the same purpose to leave the nations of Europe to choose their own dynasties and form their own systems of government. This consistent moderation may justly demand a corresponding moderation. We should regard it as a great calamity to ourselves, to the cause of good government, and to the peace of the world, should any European Power challenge the American people, as it were, to the defence of republicanism against foreign interference. We cannot foresee and are unwilling to consider what opportunities might present themselves, what combinations might offer to protect ourselves against designs inimical to our form of government.—The United States desire to act in the future as they have acted heretofore; they never will be driven from that course but by the aggression of European Power; and we rely on the wisdom and justice of those Powers to respect the system of non-interference which has so long been sanctioned by time, and which, by its good results, has approved itself to both continents.

The correspondence between the United States and France, in reference to questions which have become subjects of discussion between the two governments, will, at a proper time, be laid before Congress.

When, on the organization of our government, under the Constitution, the President of the United States delivered his inaugural address to the two Houses of Congress, he said to them, and through them to the country and to mankind, that "the preservation of the sacred fire of liberty and the destiny of the republican model of government are justly considered as deeply, perhaps as finally staked on the experiment intrusted to the American people." And the House of Representatives answered Washington by the voice of Madison: "We adore the invisible hand which has led the American people, through so many difficulties, to cherish a conscious responsibility for the destiny of republican liberty. More than seventy-six years have glided away since these words were spoken; the United States have passed through severer trials than were foreseen; and now, at this new epoch in our existence as one nation, with our Union purified by sorrows, and strengthened by conflict established by the tue of the people, the greatness of the occasion invites us once more to repeat, with solemnity, the pledges of our fathers to hold ourselves answerable before our fellow-men for the success of the republican form of government. Experience has proved its sufficiency in peace and in war; it has vindicated its authority through dangers and afflictons and sudden and terrible emergencies which would have crushed any system that had been less firmly fixed in the hearts of the people. At the inauguration of Washington the foreign relations of the country were few, and its trade was repressed by hostile regulations; now all the civilized nations of the globe welcome our commerce, and their governments profess towards us amity. Then our country felt its way hesitatingly along an untried path, with States so little bound together by rapid means of communication as to be hardly known to one another, and with historic traditions extending over very few years; now intercourse between the States is swift and intimate the experience of centuries has been crowned into a few generations, and has created an intense, indestructible nationality. Then our jurisdiction did not reach beyond the inconvenient boundaries of the territory which had achieved independence; now, through cessions of lands, first colonized by Spain and France, the country has acquired a more complex character, and has for its natural limits the chain of Lakes, the Gulf of Mexico and on the east and west the two great oceans.—Other nations were wasted by civil wars for ages before they could establish for themselves the necessary degree of unity; the latent conviction that our form of government is the best ever known to the world, has enabled us to emerge from the civil war within four years, with a complete vindication of the constitutional authority of the general government, and with our local liberties and State institutions unimpaired. The throngs of emigrants that crowd to our shores are witnesses of the confidence of all peoples in our permanence. Here is the great land of free labor, where industry is blessed with unexampled rewards, and the bread of the workingman is sweetened by the consciousness that the cause of the country "is his own cause, his own safety, his own dignity." Here every one enjoys the free use of his faculties and the choice of activity as a natural right.—Here, under the combined influence of a fruitful soil, genial climes and happy institutions, population has increased fifteen fold within a century. Here through the easy development of boundless resources wealth has increased with two fold greater rapidity than numbers, so that we have become secure against the financil vicissitudes of other countries, and, alike in business and in opinion, are truly independent. Here more and more care is given to provide education for every one born on our soil. Here religion released from political connection with the civil government, refuses to subserve the craft of statesmen, and becomes, in its independence, the spiritual life of the people. Here toleration is extended to every opinion, in the quiet certainty that truth needs only a fair field to secure the victory. Here the human mind goes forth unshackeled in the pursuit of science, to collect stores of knowledge and acquire an ever increasing mastery over the forces of nature. Here the national domain is offered and held in millions of separate freeholds, so that our fellow-citizens, beyond the occupants of any other part of the earth, constitute in reality a people. Here exists the democratic form of government; and that form of government, by the confession of European statesmen, "gives a power of which no other form is capable, because it incorporates every man with the State, and arouses everything that belongs to the soul."

Where in past history, does a parallel exist to the public happiness which is within the reach of the people of the United States? Where, in any part of the globe, can institutions be found of suited to their habits or so entitled to their love as their own free Constitution? Every one of them, then, in whatever part of the land he has his home, must wish its perpeinity. What of them will not now acknowledge, in the words of Washington, that "every step by which the people of the United States have advanced to the character of an independent nation, seems to have been distinguished by some token of Providential agency!" Who will not join with me in the prayer that the invisible hand which has led us through the clouds that gloomed around our path, will so guide us onward to a perfect restoration of fraternal affection, that we of this day may be able to transmit our great inheritance of State governments in all their rights of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor, to our posterity, and they to theirs through countless generations.

1830—	Charles V. Culver,	Ohio,	banker.

Mr. Dawson's seat is contested by Dr. Smith Fuller, and Mr. Coffroth's by Gen. Wm. H. Koontz.

Of the 26 Members, 20 are lawyers, and 6 are not—18 were born in the State, and 8 without. Old Vermont leads the list with wisdom and age, and young Ohio closses it with vim and vigor. Our member, Col. Miller, is well towards the head, and no doubt will set a proper example and take good care of the boys.

Pennsylvania Steel Works.

An immense establishment is now in progress which will be the most extensive ever erected in America, and will be on this continent what the celebrated works at Sheffield, England are in Europe.—One thousand experienced workmen in steel will be brought from England, while fifteen hundred skilled mechanics will be required for the full operation of the works. This will be a great national advantage, as a very large amount of gold is annually sent to Europe for what will now be manufactured here. Our great State of Pennsylvania, and our Capital, is selected for the important enterprise.—The officers of the Company have fixed upon the Keller farm, 2½ miles southeast of Harrisburg, immediately on the line of the Railroad, and engineers are already on the ground surveying the necessary lines for the area required for the erection of the works. This will give a great impetus to the growing prosperity of Harrisburg.

☞ THE JUNIATA SENTINEL has the Largest Circulation of any paper published in this County. It is therefore the best advertising medium. It is a Paper, truly loyal, ably conducted, a first class Localist, and well worthy of the patronage of every loyal citizen in the County.

President's Message.

We present to our readers this week all the important portions of the President's Message. Had it not been too long for our columns, we should have published it entire. We have not, however, omitted anything that is of general interest. It is an able and comprehensive State paper, and no doubt expresses the views and principles that will govern President Johnson through his entire Administration.

CONGRESS.

Congress has assembled at Washington and commenced its session on Monday, the 4th day of December. Hon. Schuyler Colfax was elected Speaker, and Hon. Edward McPherson Clerk. None of the members from the States lately in rebellion were permitted to take their seats.—Hon. Thaddeus Stevens offerad a resolution which, we think, will settle the question of their admission, at least until he sees proper to bring up the matter, which we sincerely hope will not be during the present session. The following is the resolution:

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled, that a joint committee of fifteen shall be appointed, nine of whom shall be members of the House and six of the Senate, who shall enquire into the condition of the States which formed the so-called Confederate States of America, and report whether they or any of them are entitled to be represented in either House of Congress, with leave to report at any time by bill, or otherwise; and, until such report shall have been made and finally acted upon by Congress, no members shall be received in either House from any of the said so-called Confederate States, and all papers relating to the Representatives of said States, shall be referred to the Committee without debate.

The Copperhead papers of course are teeming with abuse of the Union members for refusing to admit their Southern brethren. Their sympathy for the last four years has been with them and it would be quite unnatural if they refused them "aid and comfort" now. If the Copperheads could only devise some plan whereby they might secure the admission of their "reconstructed" friends, what a reunion and communing of congenial spirits there would be. What a record these men who pronounced the war "four years of failure," could exhibit to the men who failed to die in the "last ditch." How mutually they could boast of their infamous deeds, and rejoice over the treasure that was wasted, the blood that was shed and the murder that was committed, and for which they are equally accountable. The resolution offered by Mr. Stevens and the decided stand that the Union members have taken relative to this matter will meet with the unqualified endorsement of the people. We believe in keeping Rebels out of Congress. It is time enough to admit them when that devilish spirit of treason is fully eradicated.

☞ The Right Way, is the name of a decidedly neat little weekly, published gratuitously at Boston. The articles contained therein are apparently the offspring of master minds, as they are well written and to the point. It cereainly has "the right way" in the great issues of the day. It is in favor of making Jeff Davis an example for his treason, by punishment, and thinks the gray-haired traitor Lee not a whit better than Jeff. It joins heartily in the support of the President, and denounces such men as Greeley and Beecher in their "soft sodering" to the rebels. Any one desiring a copy free, will address William W. Thayer, 221 Washington St., Boston.
