PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

On the first page of the SENTINEL, this week, will be found a report of a conversation between President Johnson and Governor Cox, of Ohio. Now, there it will be seen the President regrets the difference between him and Congress, and hopes they may meet on some common ground of settlement. He reiterates his determination to adhere to the Union party and settle any difference of opinion between bimself and Congress within the lines of that party. He, to some extent, explains, or rather attempts to explain away his speech to the crowd of rehels before the goor of the White House on the 22nd of February. It is a difficult task, as there can be no excuse or palliation for that disgraceful exhibition of passion The President of the United States should not belittle himself by coming the rigmarole attached to them.
