UNION STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The Union State Central Committee held a meeting in Philadelphia on the 3d instant.

Reports from the different counties were received, and all were of the most gratifying character.

The following address was ordered to be published: COMMITTEE ROOMS, No. 1105 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA, Sept 3, 1866.

FELLOW CITIZENS.—The superficial server might suppose, after the fearful struggles, sacrifices and sufferings of the last five years, that we could safely rely on our efforts and watchfulness; and, relying on our individual affairs, permit the machinery of the government to run itself.

They did under the pretext that a State had a constitutional right to secede from the Union. The same thing had been attempted by South Carolina in 1863; but, under the vigorous administration of President Jackson, the effort signally failed.

Under this free Democratic charter for rebellion, the election of Abraham Lincoln was claimed by the rebel States as an "infraction" of the "compact," and they chose secession and civil war as the mode, and the destruction of the Union and of the Government as "the measure of redress."

Not until April, 1865, were the rebels finally overcome; and then only by the power of our armies, which they could no longer withstand.

He is no obscure personage, but one of the representative men of these eventful times. As a civilian he has filled with ability and distinction many important public positions, requiring intelligence, discretion, and the highest order of integrity and administrative ability.

As a competitor the Democratic party has presented the Hon. Hiestor Clymer. He, too, is a representative man; but it is of his party, rather than of his country.

In 1861 he voted against the bill for the arming of the State; and after the news of the attack on Fort Sumter had fired the hearts of our people.

In 1862, when reverses had overtaken our armies, and our credit was strained to the utmost to keep men in the field.

In February, 1864, in a speech in the Senate, referring to the recent defeat of Vallandigham in Ohio, and of Woodward in Pennsylvania.

In March, 1866, the Union party assembled in convention to nominate a candidate for Governor. It reaffirmed its patriotic principles as proclaimed and fought for during the war.

He has served the people as postmaster and as mayor of a city, as judge of a court, and as Governor of a Territory. As a volunteer soldier he is the pride of his comrades, and an honor to his State.

He has given to his country his first-born son, killed in battle; he has periled his life and shed his blood for the flag and cause of our country.

ORGANIZATION.

Sundry dispatches captured from the enemy disclose his mode of organization and plan of campaign. The chairman of their State Central Committee, as a sort of head center, appoints a reliable subordinate in every election district in the State.

These are semi-military secret organizations, and the members are admitted by initiation, at which the candidate "places his right hand on his left breast," and enters into most solemn vows to "vote against all men who are willing to give the negro either political or social equality in this State, or in any other State, District or Territory of this country."

Complete your township and county organizations without delay; revive at once everywhere the Leagues and Associations which proved of such vast service during the war; let every friend feel that he has something to do in the good work.

We stand over the ruins of a gigantic rebellion, the most formidable enemy republican institutions ever encountered.

Such is an out-line of the inglorious record of Hiestor Clymer, and by it, as he declared on a recent occasion, he is determined to stand.
