THE UNREPRESENTED STATES.

A great deal of fuss is made just now by Johnson and his satellites about Congress undertaking to meet and transact business with seventeen States unrepresented in the House of Representatives. In the Senate only ten are unrepresented, and they because of their own bloody and terrible rebellion. The seven additional States that are not represented in the House had ample notice of the meeting of Congress, and could and should have elected representatives. As they have not chosen to do so, the fault rests with themselves. Six of these States have not yet elected their members. The seventh has done so, but the sole member is ab sent. Were all of the seven fully represented in the House it would not make any difference in the state of parties there. Three of these are New England States, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut electing eight members, all of against the House by the copperheads .--California is another of the absent States, cans.

mer by Congress, they could all have been sympathizers. represented, as Tennessee was. If they choose now to accept the terms offered by Congress they may be represented. Their absence is only of importance to themselves, and does not in any way invalidate a correct idea; but the truth appears to ing sympathy. he that Johnson had labored with so much zeal as to have turned out of office every Republican who held a commission, and to have appointed instead of these men either rank copperheads or members of the Bread and Butter Brigade.

No sooner had the commissions been thus issued to new men, than these John sonian zealots turned out every Republican within their reach who held a position as deputy, or clerk, or messenger, or anything else. In short, the entire sum of the vast patronage of the national government had been handed over to the Democratic party, to be used against the Republicans in the elections. Regular assessments were levied in all the public offices, to aid the copperhead cause, and yet not one of these men held office legally. All held by the usurpation of the President, and in defiance of the constitutional restraint given the Senate to prevent just such abuses.

All of the commissioned officers were legislated out of office by Congress.

That much was within their power, for these men had not neen confirmed, and their original appointment was illegal --Unfortunately, all the copperheads and whom will be Republicans. It is rather time servers appointed to the minor offices amusing to find the absence of these Yankee | hold on, and there is no power to remove members made a cause of complaint them until some proper official undertakes the task. The Senate is in session, and ready to receive nominations and act up and her members, too, will be Republi- on them ; but, meantime, all the commis sioned offices are vacant, and Johnson

It is not the fault of Congress that cannot appoint Copperheads, because the these States are not represented. The Senate will not confirm them. The report says that, a large number of witnesses have been examine and documents colleced, but the investigation covers a broad follows, field, and in view of the ungnitude of the interests involved, the cummittee has not been able to conclude is labors. The committee not having fuly investigated all the charges preferred ag inst the Presi dent, it is deemed mexpedient to submit any conclusion Leyond the satement that sufficient testimony has beer brought to its notice to justify and demath a further investigation. Mr. Rogers made a minur ity report, declaring that the committee had refused to allow the testimony to be reported to the House.

The Free Railroad Law.

The Free Railroad law came up for consideration and final passage. The position of this bill has been as follows Various Senators from the western and central part of the State have for two years past urged the passage of a lawal lowing any person willing to furnish the money to build railroads anywhere in Pennsylvania. Under the auspices of these gentlemen a bill was prepared. The friends of this bill being in the minor y a new act was presented, with the same title, by the mojority. This new act varejected and opposed by the western and central Senators as not being sufficiently majority, as below. The bill as passel is in substance as follows :

The first section authorizes any number of eitligens, not less than nine, to ca struct and operate a steam railway, with a capital stock not less than $15,000 permile, and not less than six nor more than twelve directors. The preliminary agreements must be acknowledged before as alderman, and filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and the ing claims against the same will please pre ompany shall have power to hold such the authority of Congress. It is the bu sinces of the States themselves to attend to the matter of representation.

If by any neglect of their own they go unrepresented, they cannot plead that fact as an argument against the authority of the Congress from which they choose to be absent. The meeting of a new Congress promptly on the first day of its term will have the useful effect of including all the States to elect their members in advance of that time, so that such occurrences as the incompleteness exhibited by Congress in 1861 may not be repeated. and Congress may always be ready to act in any important emergency. We should like to see all the States elect their Representatives on the same day, as they all now vote for President in one day, and doubtless this will in the end be the result. The long interregnum of Congress in 1865 was seized upon by President Johnson as an excuse for usurping power to arrange the whole subject of reconstruction to suit himself, and in like mannor in 1861 President Lincoln was compelled to act without authority of law until Congress could meet to sanction his nots. If there be any one to blame now, it must be the States that remain unrepresented through their own neglect,

THE ACTING VICE PRESIDENT.

It is remarked by a cotemporary that the selection of Senator Wade to be presa contingency, for the first time in the history of the Government-that growing out of the possibility of his becoming President by virtue of his office: He is the forty-second Senator elected President of the Senate pro tempore, and he will succeed John Langdon, Richard Henry Lee, Theodore Sedgwick, William H. Crawford, James Barbour, Nathaniel Macon, William R. Kink, Soloman Foot and other prominent men. Mr. Wade was born in Massachusetts in the first year of the present century, and went, when twenty-one, to Ohio, where he educated himself as a lawyer.

-Ex-Governor Browa, of Georgia, advises the people of that State to accept the terms offerred by the bill recently passed in Congress. He tells them they can never get better terms.

A fight took place on Tuesday night at Talagha, about eight miles south of Dublin, between the armed police and a large body of Fenians. One of the latter was killed and five were wounded.

The Police captured eighty prisoners and six loads of amunition, and up to dark to day over two hundred prisoners have been brought into Dublin.

The main body of the Fenians engaged in the fight retreated to the hills north of Dublin, with Lord Strathmore, the commander of the British forces in Ireland. in pursuit.

The police station at Kilmallox, nineteen miles south of Limerick, in the province of Munster, was attacked by two hundred Fenians, who were repulsed, leaving three of their number dead on the field, and leaving fifteen prisoners.

The barracks of the police at Dromore, county Down, in the north, had been fired by an incendiary, and totally destroyed. The manager of the Union Bank and a mounted police messenger had been shot ia Dromore.

Reports from Dublin state that the various bands of Fenians appeared to be well supplied with rations, and they seem to have risen suddenly in all parts of Ireland.

They attacked the coast guard station at Killelagh, in county Clare, and took ident of the Senate, was made in view of away their arms. Assaults have been made upon the stations at Caryfort, in Wicklow county, and upon that at Holy Cross, and the Fenians supplied themselves with arms from all these places. The excitement in Tipperary is intense. Gen. Glesson is reported to be there.

Charles F. Browne, better known as "Artemas Ward," the American humorist, author of a series of popular comic productions, and a successful lecturer, died at Southampton yesterday.
