I could not call her mother.

To night I hear her singing A song I used to love, What its sweet notes were uttered By ser who sings above ; It pained my breast to hear it, And my tears I could not smother, For every word was hallawed By the dear voice of my mother.

My father, in the sunshine Of happy days to come, May half forget the shadow That darkened our old home ; His heart to more is lonely, But me and little brother Must still be orphan children,

God can give us but one mother They've borne my mother's picture From its accustomed place, And set beside my father's A younger, fairer face ; They've made her dear old chamber The bourdair of another, But I will not forget thee,

It was a pleasant affair; but, like all similar assemblages, it dispersed, and the bride returned to her chamber, first having whispered to the fond groom, "don't a first request, he obeyed, waited the time auxiously, nor let the hand of the ticking clock pass by a second limit, era be had gone to her with whom his life was joined. Rapping gently at the bridal chamber door and receiving no reply, bave asked for the balance, and I should be entered unbidden and saw his wife lying on the bed, arrayed in night-gear of purest white presenting a picture of beauty, taste and lovliness beyond comparison. One step further, a closer look, and the blood rushed back to his heart -she was dead! Loudly calling for help, father, mother, sister, bridesmaid, all the bousehold rushed to the room. The mother discovered that her daughter still breathed up the street. He was so rejoiced at ed, but, horror upon horrors! there lay the empty vial from which the fatal preservation, that he set out on a run and draught had been taken. Messengers were dispatched for physicians, the putient was rubbed and sprinkled, and hopes were entertained of her revival, symptoms looking favorable. At this juncture, some one picked up a folded paper
