Select Poetry.

A GRAND OLD POEM.

Who shall judge a man from manners?
Who shall judge him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May bespeak the golden ore
Of the humblest thoughts and feelings—
Satin vests could do no more.

There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever weling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden,
Hidden, crushed and overgrown;
God, who craves by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest,
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man, upraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters, rulers, lords remember
That your nearest hind is man—
Men by labor, man by feeling,
Men by thought, and men by fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine,
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little reed-clad rills,
There are facile, high high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills;
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me;
For, to Him, all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth or fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned
And fattened on the same;
By the sweat of others' forehead,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's entraged freedom
Vainly lifted up his voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with lovelessness and light,
Secret wrongs shall never prosper,
While there is a sunny right;
God, whose world-beard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles,
As the pebbles of the sea.

Miscellaneous Reading.

THRILLING ENCOUNTER WITH A DEN OF BLACK SNAKES.

Prof. J. Mitchell, the celebrated "South Mountain Wizard," while out gunning last Friday, had a most thrilling adventure with a den of Black Snakes, known as Racers, from which he narrowly escaped with his life. As is his habit, the Professor had taken his favorite carbine and gone into the Mountain after squirrels. Best part of the forenoon had been spent beating through the brush and over the rocks, without meeting with any adventure, and but in ordinary success in procuring game, &c. Suddenly, however, he came to a ledge of rocks, about a mile from the South Mountain House.—Stopping a moment to take a survey of the surroundings, he saw a large Black Snake stretched out on a rock, sunning himself. He at once took up a couple of stones, and threw one at his snakeship, but, unfortunately, missed him. This aroused the Snake, and in an instant he had uncoiled himself, and stood with his head erect, as if indignant at this intrusion—and at the same time gave a loud, shrill hiss, or, rather, a whistle. The Professor delivered his second stone with such precision as to mortally wound his enemy. No sooner, however, had he thrown the stone, when he heard a fearful rustling among the brush to his left, and another whistle, louder and shriller than the first. Turning his eye in the direction from whence came the noise, he saw a monstrous Black Snake, (a Racer) coming directly toward him, with his head erect about five feet from the ground, and his forked tongue darting from his distended jaws, as if bent on fight. The Professor, (who is an acknowledged crack shot,) immediately raised his Carbine, fired! and had the proud satisfaction of seeing the monster Snake roll over in the agonies of death—having split his head open with the ball. This proved but the commencement of the battle—for, before the Professor had time to congratulate himself upon his success in vanquishing two of his foes, a third one, measuring about eleven feet in length, (and thick in proportion) had approached to within a few feet of him—his head erect—hissing, and darting his tongue out in a manner to appal the stoutest heart. To retreat was out of the question; a fight was the only alternative; and quick as thought he leveled his carbine at the Snake's head—but, unfortunately, missed it, at the same time dropping it, (his carbine) upon the ground.—With the rapidity of lightning, the Black Snake attacked the Professor, and commenced winding his slimy coils around his legs and body—higher and tighter at every coil of his loathsome form, until the Professor was unable to move a foot. His efforts to extricate himself from the "coils of death,"—as they seemed to him—were unavailing, for with every effort the fobbs tightened, and the work of respiration became difficult. Death and the Snake stared him in the face, and made the cold chills of horror and agony creep over his body. It was a fearful moment—a moment of the most intense horror and agony, that made the flesh creep, the blood chill, and the hair literally to "stand on end like quills upon a fretful porcupine." Noting but his great presence of mind saved him from strangulation and a loathsome death! Recollecting that his hunting knife hung by his side, he seized it, and with his nerves braced by despair, drew it across the body of the Snake, severing it in two at one stroke. The coils relaxed—the Snake dropped dead at his feet, and the Professor was free again. By this time he heard a great rustling in the bushes, and the dry bark cracking in every direction, accompanied by loud, shrill, angry hisses and whistling as if the whole surrounding woods was filled with Snakes. Deeming discretion the better part of valor, he hastily grabbed up his carbine, gripped his hunting-knife, and beat a precipitate retreat. The Professor was pursued by the Black Snake for some distance, but being in a hurry he had no time to look back and count the numbers. He says that had they come one at a time he would not have retreated; but to attack him by companies, brigades and divisions, was enough to frighten any man.

We have endeavored to give the facts as narrated by the Professor himself.—Mr. Mitchell is well known in this community, and we have no reason to believe the facts have been exaggerated. We have since been informed that this species of Snake is very plenty in the mountains, and have frequently been known to attack persons who intruded into their dens.—Bonobos Old Fellow.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

A Scotch emigrant passed through Milwaukee not long since, on route for Minnesota. In his family was his eldest daughter, who is described as of extraordinary beauty, and a form of faultless symmetry. Her every movement was graceful and ladylike. After dinner, the head of the family sauntered out to obtain a glimpse of Milwaukee. In his rambles, he found a young fellow-countryman, who had preceded him about six years. The two were soon engaged in conversation about auld Scotia, closing with an invitation from the old gentleman to the young man to visit his family.—This was accepted. The moment the young man was introduced to the daughter, he was blindly in love, and before the interview closed, proposed and was referred to father. The old gentleman took the matter into consideration, made due inquiry into the character and prospects of the young man, was abundantly satisfied, and within twenty hours from their first meeting the two were made one.—The parents proceeded west, and the bride and groom came eastward on a wedding tour.

UNRULY BOYS in East Boston are giving their teachers considerable trouble. A few days since, one of the gang (organized to resist their teachers,) who had been very troublesome, when brought up for correction, resisted. The master admonished by the recent case in the Dwight school, sent the boy home, but the scamp on his way tore the skin off his face, and presented himself to his parents covered with blood and his clothes partly torn.—The indignant parent brought the boy to the police station, breathing legal vengeance against the barbarous master; but a little investigation revealed the fact that the master had not punished him at all, and that the young rogue had punished himself.

A WIT once asked a peasant what part he performed in the great drama of life "I mind my own business" was the cautious reply.

COPPERHEAD NOMINEE FOR SUPREME JUDGE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The Harrisburg Telegraph says: George Sharwood, of Philadelphia, was nominated on the second ballot by the Copperheads of Pennsylvania, in State Convention assembled, on Tuesday, as their candidate for Supreme Judge. The result took no one by surprise, except one or two aspirants for the same honor, and while all the delegates who have a knowledge of the legal profession recognized Mr. Sharwood as a lawyer of ability, it was freely admitted by many of the shrewder politicians in the Convention that, in a personal sense, the nominee is the weakest and most ill-advised any party ever made. Mental capacity, without the physical force of health, and ordinary constitutional strength to give it activity, is in very little use in a position such as Supreme Judge, where great labor is exacted in the discharge of its duties. Mr. Sharwood is afflicted with a bodily disease which unfits him, half his time, for labor of every kind. For this reason his nomination is unjust to the other members of the Court, who if he should be elected (which is not within any man's calculation) would be compelled to do their own and Sharwood's portion of allotted work. This is a most important fact, which was are justified in bringing before the public for early consideration.

ARTEMUS WARD was very fond of telegraphing, and studied it for amusement. He was a very good "sender." In this connection it will be remembered that, to the telegram of a California Lecture Committee, "What will you take for one hundred nights?" Artemus promptly replied, "Brandy and water."

SHIP OF DEATH FLOATS INTO A PORT OF THE SHETLAND ISLANDS.

Since the time when the Ancient Mariner told the terrible tale of the cursed- laden ship with her crew of ghastly corpses, no more thrilling story of the sea has been related than that of the whale ship Diana, that recently drifted into one of the Shetland Islands.

A year ago she left the Shetlands on a whaling voyage to the Arctic regions, having on board fifty men. From that time nothing was heard of her. The friends of those on board became alarmed.—Money was raised and premiums offered to the first vessel that would bring tidings of the missing ship, but all to no avail.—Hope was almost abandoned.

On the 21 of April the people near Roma's Vos, in one of the Shetland Isles, were started at seeing a ghastly wreck of a ship sailing into the harbor. Battered and ice-crushed, sails and cordage cut away, boats and spars cut up for fuel in the terrible Arctic winter, her deck covered with dead and dying, the long lost Diana sailed in like a ship from Dead-man's Land. Fifty men sailed out of Lerwick in her on a bright May morning last year. All of the fifty came back on her on the 2d of April, this year; the same, yet how different!

Ten men, of whom the captain was one, lay stiffened corpses on the deck, thirty-five lay helplessly sick and some dying, two retained sufficient strength to creep aloft and the other three crawled feebly about the deck. The ship was boarded by the islanders, and as they climbed over the bulwarks, the man at the wheel fainted from excitement; one of them died as he lay, his death being announced by the fellow occupant of his berth feebly moaning, "Take away this dead man." On the bridge of the vessel lay the body of the captain, as it had lain for four months, with nine of his shipmates by his side, all decently laid out by those soon expected to share their fate.

The survivors could not bear to sink the bodies of their comrades into the sea, but kept them so that when the last man died the fated ship that had been their common home should be their common tomb. The surgeon of the ship worked faithfully to the last, but cold, hunger, and scurvy, and dysentery were too much for him. The brave old captain was the first victim, and died blessing his men.—Then the others fell, one by one, until the ship was tenanted only by the dead and dying. One night more at sea would have left the Diana a floating coffin. Not one of the fifty would have lived to tell the ghastly tale.
