Select Poetry.

The American Woman's Song
ON THE
FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE'S TRI-UMPH.

There is glorious joy in our thousands of hearts,
For the Grand Exposition of Uses and Arts,
Has the First Silver Medal on the Florence bestowed,
And our favorite sparkles in Victory's road!

'Twas 'tis right, as we know, but 'tis beautiful yet,
To behold on the best, Glory's coronal set;
And America's women in gladness are seen,
Singing over the Crown, on their Sewing Machine.

It has saved us from labor, and sickness and woe,
It has suffered health's rose on the full cheek to glow,
It has given us time for the culture of mind,
And for these in our home 'tis for ever enshrined.

sacred joy of the justice on the Florence bestowed,
Ever now shall it lighten House-wifery's load;
While for ages America's daughters shall gaze,
On the Best with their love, on its Metal with praise.

"My brain is on fire," exclaimed Lucy.
"Shall I blow it out," asked Joseph holding a revolver at her head.
"If you have the heart to do so," she replied, falling helplessly on his bosom. The nuptials were solemnized just one week from that eventful day.

Josh Billings says there is nothing more touching in this life, than to see a poor, but virtuous young man struggling with a moustache.
One good recipe for a man to preserve his hair is to remain a bachelor.

Miscellaneous Reading.

A LITTLE TOO PUNCTUAL.

The hour was approaching for the departure of the New Haven steamboat from her berth at New York, and the usual crowd of passengers, newsboys, fruit vendors, cabmen and dock loafers were assembled on and about the boat.

We were gazing at the motely group from the foot of the dock stairs, when our attention was attracted by the singular action of a tall, brown Yankee, in an immense brown hat, chocolate colored coat and pantaloons, and a fancy vest. He stood near the starboard paddle box, and scrutinized sharply very female coming on board, every now and then consulting his enormous bull's eye watch, which he raised from the depths of a capacious sash, by means of a powerful steel chain. After mounting guard in this manner, he dashed furiously down the gang plank and up the wharf, re-appearing again on board almost instantly, expressing the most intense anxiety. This series of operations he performed several times, after which he rushed about the boat wildly, and hopelessly ejaculating:

"What's the time of day? Wonder if my repeater is fast? Whar's the cap'n? Whar's the steward? Whar's the mate? Whar's the boss that owns this ship?"

"What's the matter, sir," we ventured to ask him, when he halted for a moment for breath.

"Hain't seen nothin' of a gal in a blue sunbonnet, with a Canton crape shawl (cost fifteen dollars,) pink gown and brown boots, hey? Come aboard while I've been looking for the cap'n, at the hind part of the ship—have ye, hey?"

"No such person has come on board," he screamed; "married yesterday! All her trunks and mine aboard, under a pile of baggage as tall as a Connecticut steeple! The black nigger says he wont hand it out to me, and I won't leave my baggage anyhow. My wife—only think of it—was to have come on board at half-past four, and here it is now most five. What's become of her? She can't have eloped! We hain't been married long enough for that. You don't think she's been abducted, do ye, Mister? Speak—answer—won't ye. Oh! I'm ravin' distracted.—What are they ringin' that bell for? Is the ship on fire?"

"It is the signal for departure—the first bell; the second bell will ring in four minutes."

"Thunder! you don't say so! Whar's the cap'n?"

"That gentleman in the blue coat."

The Yankee darted to the captain's side.

"Cap'n, stop the ship for ten minutes, will ye?"

"But ye must, I tell ye; I'll pay ye for it. How much will ye take?"

"I could not do it."

"Cap'n, I'll give ye tew dollars," gasped the Yankee.

The captain shook his head.

"If you give five dollars and a half—and a half—and a half!" he kept repeating, and dancing about in agony like a mad bull.

"This boat starts at five precisely," said the captain shortly, and turned away.

"Oh, you stony-hearted heathin!" murmured the Yankee, almost bursting into tears. "Partin' man and wife, and we just one day married!"

At this moment the huge paddle wheel began to paw the water, and the walking beam descended heavily, shaking the huge fabric to the centre. All who were not going to New Haven went ashore. The hands began to haul in the gang plank; the fasts were already cut loose.

"Legge that plank," roared the Yankee, collaring one of the hands. "Drop it like a hot potato, or I'll throw you into the dock!"

"Yo-yo," shouted the men in chorus, as they heaved on the gangway.

"Shut up, ye brayin' donkeys!" yelled the maddened Yankee, "or there'll be ugly sort of work."

But the plank was got aboard, and the boat splashed past the pier. In an instant the Yankee pulled off his coat, and flung his hat beside it on the deck.

"Are you drunk or crazy?" cried a passenger, seizing him.

"I'm going to fling myself into the dock and swim ashore," cried the Yankee. "I must leave my Sairy Ann alone in New York city. You may divide my baggage among ye—let me go—I kin swim."

He struggled so furiously that the consequences of his rashness might have been fatal had not an apparition chagred his purpose. A very pretty young woman in a blue bonnet, white Canton crape shawl, pink dress and brown boots came toward him. The big brown Yankee uttered one stentorian shout of "Sairy Ann," clasping her in his arms in spite of her struggling, and kissed her heartily, right before the passengers.

"Whar did ye come from?" he inquired.

"From the ladies' cabin," answered the bride. "You told me at half past four, but I thought I'd make, sure, and come at four."

"A little too punctual!" said the Yankee, "but it's all right now. Go ahead steam-boat. Rosin up there, firemen. Darn the expense."

When the sun set, the loving couple were seen sitting on the upper deck, the big brown Yankee's arm encircling the slender waist of the young woman in blue bonnet and pink dress. We believe they reached their destination safe and sound.

BIG TREES IN MISSOURI.

It is popularly supposed that California has the biggest trees in the world, but Prof. Swallow, of the Missouri Geological Survey, claims the distinction for his own State. He gives the following actual measurement of big trees in Southern Missouri:

The largest tree is a cypress in Mississippi county, sixty feet high, which, two feet above the ground, measures forty-three feet in circumference. Another sycamore in Howard county is thirty eight feet in diameter. A cypress in Cape Girardeau county, at a distance of one foot above the ground, measures twenty-nine feet in circumference. A cottonwood in Mississippi county measures thirty feet round, at a distance of six feet above the ground. A pecan in the same county is eighteen feet in circumference. A black walnut in Benton county measures twenty-two feet in circumference. A white oak in Howard county is twenty-six feet in circumference. A tulip tree (poplar) in Cape Girardeau county is thirty feet in circumference. There is a tupelo in Stoddard county thirty feet in circumference. A hackberry in Howard county is eleven feet in circumference. A Spanish oak in New Madrid county is twenty six feet in circumference. A white ash in Mississippi county is sixteen feet in circumference. A honey locust in Howard county is thirteen feet in circumference. There is a willow in Pemisicott county that has grown to the size of twenty-four feet in circumference and one hundred feet in height. Mississippi county boasts of a sassafras that must be the king of that tribe; it measures nine feet in circumference. A persimmon in the same county is nine feet in circumference. In the same county is a red bud six feet in circumference. In Pemisicott county there is a dogwood six feet in circumference. In Mississippi county paw-paws grow to a circumference of three feet, and grape vines and trumpet creepers to a circumference of eighteen to twenty-two inches.

GOOD.—A candidate for office, canvassing his district for voters, came upon a poor Mr. White, who had a vote to cast. Poor White was milking when Mr. Office Seeker found him.

"Shall I hold her?" asked he, seeing the animal was uneasy. The old man consented, the office seeker took the cow by the horns and the man proceeded with his milking.

"Have you had Lashell around here lately?" asked the candidate presently, referring to his rival.

"Oh, yes," said the old man, "he's behind the barn holding the calf."

SAYS Fanny Fern: "I am fifty-five, and I feel half the time as if I was just made." So do a great many of our ladies, and they keep the millinery shops going too.

Death-bed Repentance.—A tombstone in a Kentucky graveyard bears this inscription: "He lived a Democrat and died a christian!"
