"The machine is on two wheels, and drawn by two horses. It operates on the outside row of corn, passing continuourly around the field. The stalks in each bill are all cut off at once by two circular cutters, revolving toward each other, at the front of the machine. The stalks are carried thence, buts first by revolving arms and an endless apron to a pair of flated rollers which grasp the stalks and carry them rapidly through. The ears, however, being too large to pass between the rollers, are pushed out of the husks in the neatest and most effective manner. This is because the joint of the ear with the stalk is the weakest point and easily broken by contact with the roller. The ears fall into a hopper and are taken up by an elevator to a trough, whence they slide into a wagon that accompanies the machine, and carries the corn to the granary. The stalks with the husk entire are passed between the rollers to a platform, and when sufficient for a bundle accumulates it opens and drops them on the ground ready for bind ing and stacking. The muchine is provided with an arrangement by which the corn when it has fallen can be lifted off the ground and brought in contact with the saws. Provision is also made for cutting the corn while green, and placing it in bundles without husking; that process to be the subject of another operation of passing between the rollers when the corn has become perfectly ripe. It is worthy of note that the husking is accomplished without shelling a grain of corn. One man and four boys with three horses have run a working model of the machine, and cut and busked corn at the rate of ten acres per day, saving the stalks and husks perfect."

triad it, know that it cured them: those who have not, know that it cured them: those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglectof its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in cvery neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate of their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Blyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlemens, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Hillous Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness. Ellious Colic and fillious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Bysentery or Biarrhees, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system.
