torment to all kinds of cattle, especially in the wooded or timber districts. On our western prairies we are troubled to some extent, but in the opening the cattle suffer much from these plagues Mr. G. E. B. is wrong : the Estrus Loris does not, as does the Estrus equi, deposit its ova or egge, which, if unmalested, re main until the following Spring, when the full grown magget must, for its own safety, seek a fresh home, or like the fœtus past the proper time of parturition.

Now for my remedy. All persons at all acquainted with stock, will notice that WATCHES the bot fly looks, as rural, only for suitable parts in the front, or parts within reach of the mouth. Why ? Simply from instinct, for the bot can only be propagated by being taken into the stomach of the horse, where it remains. as the cattle magget does in the skin, until fresh quarters are necessary, as a longer residence in the stomach is death. Horses, like cattle, suffer more in the timber than in the open country, and NOTIONS, &C. vinced. are little troubled when kept in the stable and well and carefully groomed, of Suits made to order, reasonable whatever of the eggs may be adhering to the bairs of such a horse may be re moved by rubbing and easily by the edge of a knife. This is the only remedy for bots for once in the stomach, there they remain until ready for a new life. None but quacks attempt to remove them; no medicine, not of sufficient strength to kill several horses, would di-lodge them from the coating of the stomach or in any wise seriously interfere with them The milk and molasses and such nonsense as I have seen recommended in the papers is ridiculous.

There is a much better chance to des troy these pests when in the skin, and a much easier way to prevent them from getting there. The same most wonderful instinct guides the gad-fly of the bovine; they seem as though they knew of the rough tongue he possesses, with Boys, and Children's Shirts. Coats, Pants which, if within his reach, he would lick off the deposited egg, and so they select such parts as are out of the reach of the suit the times. tongue; and where do we most-nay. only-find them?
