As to Mr. Lyons and Dr Sterrett. we have stood in the relationship of a personal friend to both, and have done and said nothing between the gentlemen that cannot be done and said anywhere. and we shall be glad if Dr Sterrettt be comes one of the representatives of this Convention.

THERE is a political coterie of Democratic doctors in this county. Of them as obvsicians, nothing of an unfavorable character can be said. They are all good doctors. But a stiffer set of ring men cannot be found anywhere in the State. They ride whip and doctor their party till it fairly groans under the weight of their infliction. This coterie or ring had Wm. Jackman, who is a brother-in law to one of the doctors, placed at the head of the County Committee as chairman.

Mr. Jackman, almost every week, has something to say about Grant placing some of his family in office, and heretofore he has always held that to place relatives in office is wrong. That was one of his strong points against Grant. Why he has allowed his brother in law to so work upon his convictions as to be pursuaded to take an office from his rela tive, he does not explain.

It is presumed that the Register hereafter will be silent on the question of rela tives giving and taking office. It will be nicer under present circumstances to talk about something else. As President Grant's relations in office formerly bore heavily on Mr. Jackman, so now Mr. Jackman bears heavily on the Demo cratic party in this county outside of the ring, and loud and long were the protests that were uttered when he got that

We surrender our editorial space t the following remarks that were made by Thomas V. Cooper, Esq., of Delaware county, before the Republican County Convention, held in West Chester, on Tuesday. Let every one read and familiarize themselves with the character of the conspiracy that has been entered into to defeat the Republican nominee for governor.

In dropping in to witness your deliberations I had no though of being called upon to address you. He would fall in deed, however, who could not give a word of encouragement in this, the fifth national contest of the great Republican party-in behalf of a party whose previ ous contests have all, save the first, and then it was in its swadding clothes, proven successful-in behalf of a party which has grown with each contest, and other organizations-the power to purify itself-for in the present, as in all previ-

They claim that the mission of Republicanism has been filled. Do they not mistake the situation? Isn't it rather that their own missions have been filled-that they have had more than their share and must now look elsewhere; that they have taken more stock out of the concern than they put in, and that their only hope is in a new departure.

The candidates presented on the tional ticket command our attention and support. In General Grant we recog nize a man who has led us to to important victories before-we recognize one who is not merely a military hero, but whose general management, careful economy, and strict regard for the rights of all classes of citizens, stamp as posssessing the safer and better attributes of statesmanship In Henry Wilson we find a true type, a fitting outgrowth of Republican institutions-an example to the struggling and humble, a pride to the prosperous and great.
