A Flendish Crime. AN UNPARALLELED SCHEME OF VILLAINT. The attempt, only partially successful, to wreck the Cincinnati express train, that left this city on Monday evening. September 30th, for Philadelphia, has been investigated by a Coroner's inquest. and a scheme of villainy revealed that is almost unparalleled in the annals of crime. The scene of the affair was an embankment sixty feet high near Steamboat station, twenty-three miles from Philadelphia, on the short turn of a curve. The bolts holding the rails to the ties had been drawn, and the rails forced apart by bending until they were six inches out of guage, and a gap of nineteen inches existed between the ends. The rail was then wedged up so that the wheel would strike the end with full force, throw the train from the track, and send it whirling down the embankment. The plan seems to have been deliberately devised and executed. Such was the condition of the track, when at half-past two o'clock Tuesday morning. the Cincinnati express came along at the rate of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour. The rest of the story is told by a 140 11" reporter as follows: "When right on the sharp curve, the

After 102 102 discoveries showed that while their promptness saved the train and lives of 180 124 sixty-four passengers, it had not availed to save their own. The train came to a sudden stop, and the affrighted passengers, starting for the doors, were quieted week by Conductor Stackhouse saying. 'The danger is over, whatever it is.' A visit to the front of the train and the eyes saw property or not.
