Vienna.

A man's wealth is often estimated in Vienna by the number of mistresses he keeps and the magnificence of their equipage, diamonds, and dresses. There is no city in the world, not even Paris, that can rival Vienna, the metropolis of Austria in sensuality and immorality, and in these respects there is a universality that is quite remarkable.There are no flaunting courtesans in Vienna, as are to be seen in the streets of Paris, or even in New York or Baltimore. Where virtue is such a rarity there is no opportunity for making a specialty of vice, and it has no special locality. In this respect Vienna would appear to the casual visitor more free from this species of social evil than any large city, in the world; but a visit to the Hospital Hospital, where there is an average of about fourty infants received daily, or the general hospital, where its illegitimate births average thirty a day, shows the pre-eminence of Vienna over all other cities in the world. There are 20,000 soldiers always in the city, mostly young men from the provinces, who could not marry if they would, and would not if they could. They have no means to support a wife, and seldom have money sufficient to pay the church charges for the performance of the marriage ceremony.They can be seen in crowds with the young girls on the Ringstrasse, and the Prater. They form attachments, but are never expected to marry. Their example is followed by the young men in other walks of life, and I am assured there are fewer marriages in Vienna than almost any other city of one third the population. There seems to be no attempt made by the authorities or by the Church to remedy this evil, which has become so universal that—among the laboring classes especially—there are few mothers who have husbands.They can be seen in crowds with the
