THE SNOW .-- BY CHARLES LAND. An old man sadly said, "Where's the snow That fell the year that's fiel?' Where's the snow! As fruitless was the task, of many a joy that's p As the snow.

The hope of airy birth, like the snow,
Is stained on reaching earth,

Like the snow; While tia sparkling in the ray, away, Like the snow Cold, deceitful thing, is the snow, Though it come on dove like wing,
False snow,
The but rain, disguised, appears,
And our hopes frozen tears,
Like the snow.

SCOTTISH NATIONAL FEELING. The beautiful and pathetic song of LOCHABER, for music, and its effect upon the Highlanders when absent from their homes, is well shown in the following incident which occurred in Canada several years ago, and which also proves how powerful is the sympathy between this our tenement of clay, and its celestral immate, the soul:
