ORIGINAL MISCELLANY. For the Morning Post. SONG OF THE BUCANIER. BY DOSS.

My bark 's on the waters, Awaiting for thee; My home's midst the billows,-Come, Inez, with me. Whilst the bright stars are keeping Their vigils above, And all's lone on the waters, We'll whisper our love. When the shout of the storm-king Comes borne on the blast. And the sailor-boy clings With fear to the mast .-And the lightning's red glare Illumines our path,

We will dance to his fury, Aud mimic his wrath. When the foeman sweeps down, With wide-spreading sail,

And the bloody red pennon Mounts high in the gale,-We'll prepare for the combat Undaunted by fear. But fight the more bravely, Because thon art near

When the shadows of even Steal over the sea, And the village-girls speed then To dance on the lea,--Midst the softness of twilight

I'll linger for thee; Then hasten, fair Inez, And come thou with me

12

My bark's on the waters Awaiting for thee: My home 's milst the billows,-Come. Inez, with me. Whilst the bright stars are keeping Their vigils above, And all's lone on the waters, We'll whisper our love. PITTSBUBOR, March 10th, 1847.
