Did we feel inclined to migrate to the great West, we should turn our eyes in the direction of Wisconsin, where the constitution lately passed by the convention is adopted, of which we have no doubt, in all its provisions, so far as we understand, it approaches nearer to genuine democracy than any instrument of the kind now extant. We are eager to learn the returns of the election, which it is to be expected will be triumphantly sustained, for people who prefer such a home as Wisconsin now affords to the struggle for life in the old States, must be truly democratic in all their impulses and tendencies.

The Constitution extends the right of suffrage more judiciously and wisely, "No Privilege" has no longer in the first instance, the people are made more and practice justice, in a provision clearly indicated.

All kinds of times are actively foreseen. What a prospect to the future for the honest capitalist who seeks to reap the gains of a legitimate and natural trade. The workmen will be safe from the operations of "ever issues" and "bad paper."

From all this it will be observed that the Constitution proposed by the convention is a noble and just one, and hence the opposition made to it by the Whigs.

Inland.
We have been favored with a letter addressed to the Rev. G. T. Ewing of this city, from David Munro, Esq. of Londonderry, (Ireland), now in New York, in answer to Mr. Ewing's request to know the state of desultion in the North of Ireland, and whether Mr. Munro could forward by his ships a few hundred tons of provisions to Derry. Mr. Munro writes as follows:

My Dear Mr. Ewing—I have been very glad to receive your favor of the 24th inst., with reference to the desultion in the North of Ireland, and to very glad as in some parts of the South and West, but still it is not equal to what you may judge it to be in the North. I have a public meeting of the inhabitants, at which they agreed to tax themselves at the rate of 1d. in the pound on every article of value of their property, which amounted to about $100,000; this tax to be levied as an office fund, for the support of the desultion. This money was placed in the hands of a Relief Committee, and is to be applied for the relief of the poor of Derry, and its suburbs. Of this committee I was a member, and can assure you that the desultion is in a very bad state. I have seen the desultion in the extreme. In many of the miserable hovels which I visited I found every article of wearing apparel gone to the pawn office; the parents with their children were in a state of wretchedness, and the streets were covered with the bodies of the poor. It is a most deplorable state of things, and I have no doubt that the desultion will be a great blessing to the poor of Derry, and its suburbs.

Believe me, my dear sir, ever your attached friend.
DAVID MUNRO.

THE ARMY—GEN. TAYLOR'S ADDRESS.
Mr. O. J. Sergeant of the Wilkinson County (Ga.) Militia Regiment, Volunteers, furnished the following:
The commanding General has the great task of congratulating the troops upon the brilliant success which attended their arms in the conflict of the 20th and 23rd. Confident in their superiority of numbers, and stimulated by the presence of the enemy, they rendered throughout the action, with their highest pride to bring to the notice of the Government the conspicuous gallantry of their brave officers and men, and the steady and steady more than once saved the fortunes of the day.

He would also express his high satisfaction with the conduct of a small command left to hold Sallies, though not so seriously engaged as their comrades, their services were very important and efficiently rendered. While bestowing this tribute to the good conduct of the troops, the General will be the highest prize to bring to the notice of the Government the conspicuous gallantry of their brave officers and men, and the steady and steady more than once saved the fortunes of the day.

THE ARMY—GEN. TAYLOR'S ADDRESS.
The General would express his obligations to the officers and men engaged, for the cordial support which they rendered throughout the action, with their highest pride to bring to the notice of the Government the conspicuous gallantry of their brave officers and men, and the steady and steady more than once saved the fortunes of the day.
