

The Daily Morning Post

H. WALKER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR. SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 4, 1854.

Mr. Clay's Speech—No. 3. It is truly lamentable to think that a man who has filled some of the highest offices in the country...

Now that is the only inference, that any man can draw from the facts, that a statement—assuming it to be true—it is nothing less than a charge of perjury against every man, whether Democrat or Whig, who voted for that bill...

All the efforts of Mr. Clay and his partisans, to prove that "this is no war of defence, but one of aggression, and of offensive aggression, that kind, prove unavailing. His eloquent attempt to present this war as that of 1812 in contrast, is not only unjust, but, as we think we have shown, untrue.

In his message of May 11th, 1846, Mr. Polk said—Mexico has passed the boundary of the United States; she has invaded our territory; and she has shed American blood upon American soil.

There was a statement of fact, the truth or falsehood of which was self-evident, to every member of Congress. It was a matter about which there was no room for doubt for all the circumstances under which both the government of Mexico, and that of our country had acted, were fully detailed in the document stating this fact.

time when brave men, who have left their country to fight in her defence, are to be insulted by their countrymen. It is made at a time when the country's enemies are vanquished and unconfessed, might be indeed, (if Mr. Clay judges rightly) his character; to cease their course of wrong to us, by the persistence of a moderate and equitable course, and the exercise of "prudence, moderation, and wise statesmanship."

Mr. Clay has, however, said that. Thomas Corwin, who disgraced the name of an American, he said that the friends of the administration thought to entrap the Whigs by inserting a lie in the bill making provision for carrying on the war with Mexico; but exultingly declared that they failed in their attempt; for the Whigs voted for the bill, he said, and Mr. Clay, following after, and endorsing Corwin's treason, asserts, that a preamble was inserted, falsely attributing the commencement of the war to the act of Mexico.

It is true, that Mexico is a powerful and populous nation, and that she has a right to her territory, and that she has a right to her territory, and that she has a right to her territory, and that she has a right to her territory.
