therefore, to expect any thing bordering upon honesty from them, would be about as wise, as to ex-'pect to see the sun at midnight. Let us not be charged with under any charge we bring against them, to the mind of any unbiased sceker after truth. There is little or no division among them, throughout the country, respecting their candidate for the presidency, except as to the amount of capital to be manufactured by the nomination of Clay, Scott or Taylor. That they have not a particle of political honesty, is apparent, from the existence of this identical division. Henry Clay has been with them, on all the great questions dividing the country, for more than twenty years. And who is the man for whom they profess such a profound rewho has been the principal instrument in conducting this " unholy war,"—this " war of aggression," this " unrighteous act," - this " war unjust, unconstitutional, and waged by the President without any authority." He is a man who, when the first intimations of conflict reached the seat of government, was on fire to go at once to the scene of action; who almost quarrelled with his superior officer, because he was not permitted to go at the first moment which he thought proper; and whose "hasty plate of soup" made him, then, the object of ridicale in almost every federal newspaper in the country. He is a man, who, whatever may be his foibles, has served his country faithfully, in the field; who has been, and is honored by his country; but who is in no way indebted to the Federal party, for any of his greatness as a commander, or for any opportunity. Connellsville Railroad.—We understand that the prospects of the road are particularly good just now. We heard some whisperings yesterday in relation to the doings of the company, which gives great encouragement to those who are engaged in it; and the members feel satisfied that the work will progress speedily.

We advise those who have stock, to hold on to it—it will yet be valuable. Hold on for a few days, any how, till the affairs of the company are known.
