that tutest the sca-ports, as we take charge of them the moment they report themselves, and see to their well-being, and despatch them without any detention by the first ships. We say this feurlessly, as we defy only of our pussengers to shore that they were detained forty-eight hours by us in Liverpool, whilst thousands of others were detained months until they could be sent in some old craft, at a cheap rate, which, too irequently proved their
