It will not do to claim the election of 1840 as a "Whig" victory: for then there were no principles for the public eye," and they went flor Tyler, therefore, without a why or a wherefore," much to the disquiet of the party in 1841. Johnston & Stockton, Booksellers, corner of Market and Third streets, have had the politeness to send us a copy of the above work, which has just been received by them from the publishers. The book is executed in beautiful style, and is filled with reading matter of a very interesting character. The author's descriptions of travel are graphic and eloquent. At this time when the spirit of the French Revolution is extending itself over Northern Europe, every thing which relates to that portion of the world will be read with peculiar interest.

Absence of Mind. There are many amusing accounts of absent mindedness on record. We recollect one respecting Dr. Johnson, who while sitting next to his "lady love," very deliberately took her finger to pres down the tobacco burning in his pipe. A friend of ours, lately, choosing some catchup at table, and having poured it from a large bottle, put the cork into his mouth, which he commenced chewing; and was about to put a piece of bread into the bottle! The last case, however, which has come to our knowledge, was that of a valued female friend, who, having occasion to use the snuffers, soon afterwards attached them to the gold chair that was around he neck, and put her gold pencil in the snuffer-tray!
