PHILADELPHIA, May 23, 1848. Hon. Andrew Stevenson took the chair, and addressed a pertinent speech to the Convention. Prayer was delivered by Rev. Plummer. The thanks of the Convention were voted to Judge Bell, who acted as Chairman pro tem. Hon. Marcus Morton, of Mass., moved to adopt the rules of the Convention of 44, except the twothirds rule. This was warmly discussed by Mr. Yancey, in favor of the Rule. He said they could, do without New York, if she would abandon the Democratic party Mr. Morse, of La., spoke against the Rule. It had before disappointed the Democracy; it might now spring some intruder upon the people, and then farewell to Democracy. Mr. Morse explained, and said he meant no disrespect to President Polk. [Here an alarm arose that the gallery was giving way. A terrific scene followed. Many west jumping from the windows, and many persons were badly hurt-but none fatally. After a recess of half an hour, the Convention re-assembled. It was discovered that the alarm proceeded from the cracking of a bench.] After further debate, the Two thirds Rule was adopted-175 to 73. Among the Nays there are from Ohio 23, Indiana 9, Missouri 6, Wisconsin 4. The Committee reported against the Barnburners because they refused to give the pledge. By the Hermann we learn that a dispatch was received from Paris, on the evening of the 5th, which hints at some difficulty that occurred in the organization of the new Republic. The Chamber vote stood: Buchese 391, Yulate 234, Romb 91; the former was chosen. The dispatch hints that the compromise consulate was the result of intimation by the mob. No particulars were received.
