

The Morning Post.

L. HARPER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 12, 1846.

PITTSBURGH:

Congressional Nominations.

In the District composed of the counties of Cambria, Mercer and Venango, JAMES E. McFARLAND, has been nominated by the Democratic party candidate for Congress. Mr. McFarland is a prominent and popular man, and is well known in the state. No such man could not have received the nomination. The numerous friends of McFarland in this city will be pleased to hear of his success. He will be elected by a large, a tremendous majority.

In the XVth district, composed of the counties of Franklin, Cambria, Fayette, Greene, Jefferson, Armstrong, Indiana, Westmoreland, and Fayette, Mr. James A. McLean, as the Democratic candidate.

In the Beek district, the Democratic Convention, on the 2d inst, unanimously nominated Hon. William Strong, the present representative of that congressional district in Pennsylvania for re-election. In the XIXth district, composed of the counties of Allegheny, Washington, Blair and Indiana, Col. Andrew Powers, Jr., has been nominated as the Democratic candidate.

In the Barks district, the Democratic Convention, on the 2d inst, unanimously nominated Wm. A. Parry, as the Democratic candidate.

In the IIth district, Jas. C. Van Dyke is the Democratic nominee for Congress.

The Canvass for Governor.

There is one thing, in the canvass of Eastern Pennsylvania, which is most remarkable. It is this—that the religious candidate, who is the President of God, has been placed in the office of Governor; to make the tour of the State, begging the People for their votes, and traveling at their expense; and that the neglect of these duties which pertain to the office of Governor, Judge Loring, is a violation of the duties of the office of Commonwealth and worth any sacrifice to induce the People to vote for him, nor intends to do so. He takes what he thinks is a strictly just view of the matter. He says that the People have chosen him to act as a member of the Canal Board, and he has no information as to whether he can be made to do so.

The People's duty forbids him to go about lecturing with the People's money; and that as the People had not called for his resignation, nor expressed any dissatisfaction whatever, with his performance of the duty as Canal Commissioner, he shall continue to discharge the duties of the office he now holds, until he is called to account for his conduct in the office of Governor. This may not be very satisfactory to his Federal ("Whig") opponents; but his friends approve of this course, and they constitute a majority of more than twenty thousand of the freemen of Pennsylvania!

The Beautiful Young Maidens and the Wicked Old Men.

The following extract was told by Col. Black, at Elizabeth, to illustrate the position of the poor "woeful heads" who have wedded themselves to the old men, and who have wedded themselves to the old women.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to marry, unless he should come across a lady who would be a model of perfection; and the most esential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful young maid, who had married a man of the same age, and who had married her, and he was not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was

not a bad-looking woman.

Colonel Black, who is the owner of a handsome old

bachelor, who has been the greatest part of his life

in celibacy, is a wise old man, determined not to

marry, unless he should come across a lady who

would be a model of perfection; and the most es-
ential thing, in his estimation, for the lady of his

love to possess, was a perfect set of teeth. At length

the "old coot" became acquainted with a beautiful

young maid, who had married a man of the same

age, and who had married her, and he was