

The Morning Post.

L. HARPER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

PITTSBURGH, WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 20, 1845.

General Taylor's Proprietary.

Those who were induced to give a reluctant consent to support Gen. Taylor, on the ground of his supposed availability, must now feel that they are in a truly pitiable condition. Having done so much, whose exertions and influence had kept them to their course, in order to secure the nomination of a general in the army which they had all condemned, and being willing to relinquish all pretensions to such a political party, they now find that the man, for whom they agreed to sacrifice all their former pretensions to power, has not even the right to avail himself of their services. It is in this condition that it is essentially ignorant of the constitutional history of our country, to be unable to form an opinion upon the great points of doctrine, that must be decided by us, as the representatives of the majority of the People of all the States in the Union.

The Whigs have made great calculations upon the value of Gen. Taylor's qualifications and opinions; has he diminished the favor of his political adherents, when they have heretofore been unquestionably in a majority; and we know the vote of few Federalists, who have been converted to the Whig cause, will not be sufficient to give him a majority in the Senate, or in the House of Representatives? That is the question.

Webster upon Taylor.

"G. E. M. I."

The federal party, finding that the nomination of Gen. Taylor, as their candidate for the presidency, was not popular, and that the Whigs had the ascendancy in every part of the country, have been endeavoring for some time past, to get up some sort of an excitement, in order to rally together their scattered and dismayed forces. The great leaders of the party, in every section of the country, openly refuse to support the gross vagaries of the federal party, and the true exponent of what principles, was sacrificed on the altar of "Availability," and a military chieftain and enterprising shareholder—a character as much abhorred by Northern Whigs, was selected as the standard bearer of that party. McClellan himself was not averse to the nomination, but he did not dare to appear, and, therefore, to endorse the nomineation of Gen. Taylor; but it has been all in vain. He cannot afford to forget himself as so fond of his countrymen, to avoid the responsibility of having supported the Whig candidate. Daniel Webster has not been able to form an opinion upon the party to which he is deeply wedded. Daniel Webster has not been able to form an opinion upon the great points of doctrine, that must be decided by us, as the representatives of the majority of the People of all the States in the Union.

The Whigs have made great calculations upon the value of Gen. Taylor's qualifications and opinions; has he diminished the favor of his political adherents, when they have heretofore been unquestionably in a majority; and we know the vote of few Federalists, who have been converted to the Whig cause, will not be sufficient to give him a majority in the Senate, or in the House of Representatives?
