The friends of Gen. The Philadelphia county, fone of the Democratic Electors of President, paying the state drief's togged the sta to do, or to permit to be done, injustice to a faithful public servant, there has been no occasion, there never can be one when that party were under the necessity of fawning upon or courting any man. At may be abuse of a man, known to be honest, to point out in the community, econodicals who have tried, by false testimony or otherwise, to prove him a rogue: it may be abuse of a scropulously moral man to show up, in their proper light, the blackguards who have sought to defame him, and bring him down an their own vile level: it may be abuse of a distinguished and devoted public servant, while defending him in his position under the government, to show who they are, who have held him up to the world as as a worse than savage monster, a hired netwin, and a mercenary cut-throat; and who have, in almost every way, shown that they hate him, become he was serving his country. If the man, or he party, occupying either of these laudable posiions, can be tenly said to be abusing those whom they are in fact defending against their enemies, ben may we, and the Democratic part, be justly charged with having abused, and continuing to abuse. On the 16th of August, General Hull surrendered the fort and army, by castiniation, to the British forces under the command of Major General Brock, and included Col. M'Arthur's detachment in the capitulation. The colonel had been ordered by express to return to Detroit, and he was within three or four miles of the fort, when he received intelligence of the surrender. He fall back about three miles to the river Huron, where he received the articles of capitulation, with an order from General ticles of capitulation, with an order from General Hull to surrender. The colonel was, I believe, bound in good faith to surrender; but whether he was or not, he was compelled to submit, for he had was or not, he was compelled to submit, for he had not a day's subsistence, nor a dozen rounds of ammunition for his command. A Chasn!—At short 3 o'clock, on 'Wednesday afternoon last, the stack which the bricklayers were about faishing for the Allegheny Water Warks, came down, and is now a heap of ruins. On Tuesday the workmen discovered that the stone-work at the foundation was giving way, and on Wednesdy morning certain evidences of a fall were preceived. So the workmen kept their distance, and fortunately awaited the event. At the time mentioned above, the crish occurred, and thus destroyed the labor or many days. We believe no one was hurt.
