

The Morning Post.

I. HARPER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

PITTSBURGH, WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 8, 1848.

Morning Post Job Printing Office.

Having added to our establishment a splendid Steam-Powered Printing Machine, we are prepared to do surpassed beauty and neatness, and upon the most responsible terms, to print all kinds of paper-works.

Advertisers are requested to hand in their copy before 12 M. P. This must be copied in, in order to have it printed on time, so as to be ready for the arrival of the steamer.

For Commercial and Rivers, News, will be sent "Under Telegraph Head."

More about that "Congress."

In the Philadelphia papers of the 11th, and also in the Baltimore Sun, we find the following—without my name; but as Mr. Alexander Hoga admits having sent on the dispatch which was so evidently to the same individual:

"THE PITTSBURG OUTRAGE."

A man informed that the papers at the last disclosed that he had been charged with the murder of a negro, and that he had been tried and condemned to death.

We insert the paragraph precisely as it appears in the Philadelphia and Baltimore papers; and, as something more than an echo to the statements of these Telegraph Reporter and his informants, we insert the Card of William Eichbaum, Esq., one of the oldest and most experienced lawyers of the city, who lived at the time of the facts, and, as follows:

"The Pittsburg Journal of Commerce, of the 27th of October, 1848, empowers the Post Master General to make a new arrangement into operation, without waiting for further legislation on the part of Congress."

Gentlemen—I observe in your local column of this morning that you have received an engraving to have been composed upon the subject of the abolition of slavery, and, as something more than an echo to the statements of the Post, I am happy to say that the report is perfectly particular.

It is very surprising that any person could have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and

that truth from almost any resident of that quiet

and peaceful city, could easily be obtained.

But the facts are these—Cass is very

much to the north of Pittsburg, and, as far as

we can learn, has no slaves.

It is very surprising that any person could

have been induced to publish such a report, as

the opportunities were ample in this city, and </div